KING ALFONSO'S FOES TRIUMPH AS SPAIN VOTES

Republicans Rout Monarchists.

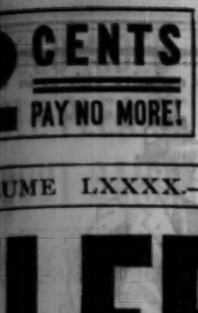
MADRID, April 12.—Spain spoke her mind today as never before.



COUNT ROMANONES.
[Acme Photo.]

Tonight, with most of the ballots counted in the nation-wide municipal elections, which were generally looked upon here as a plebiscite on the monarchy, it is evident that Alfonso XIII is not Spain's darling.

It was a Republican landslide, and the dwindling legions of the crown tonight were stunned. Four million voters, the heaviest ballot ever cast, went to the polls for the first time in eight years.

Every large city in Spain except Cadiz, and a great majority of the provincial capitals and villages, whose loyalty to the monarchy and all it represents, has never been doubted, elected republican councils. All the members of the "provisional republic" of December rode into office. Alcala Zamora, "provisional president," won the greatest majority ever recorded for a candidate in Madrid. Hundreds of others fresh out of prison were elected.

Cabinet Considers Debacle.

Spain has spoken and in towns and villages there are many tonight who consider the republic as good as proclaimed.

In the office of the ministry of the interior ministers of Alfonso's emergency cabinet, which is hardly two months old, met tonight to consider the debacle. For the first time in history Madrid saw Spain's prime minister, Admiral Aznar, guarded by the king's hussars. The cabinet's resignation within 24 hours is taken for granted.

Count Romanones, foreign minister, the first of King Alfonso's henchmen to himself an election casualty at Guadalajara, upon emerging from the cabinet session said:

"There is no use now to deny the republican temper in Spain."

Hussars Guard Palace.

A hussar regiment stationed at Alcala de Henares, 20 miles from Madrid, was rushed to the capital late tonight to do special duty at Alfonso's palace, which is guarded as it never has been since the coup of 1923, when Primo de Rivera took his army into Madrid and established a dictatorship.

Three courses are considered left open to the king.

First, abdication, which nobody thinks he will choose, now or ever.

Second, a military dictatorship, and, third, a constitutional government with a constituent assembly.

After returns from 35 out of 52 provincial capitals revealed Republican victories, the government decided to withhold the rest of the figures until tomorrow night. The monarchists are reported the hope that returns from the smaller villages will still give the crown a slight majority of aldermen, if not a plurality of votes.

Republicans Win in Capital.

In Madrid 30 Republicans won all of the contested seats. Twenty Monarchists went into office because they had no opposition. The republicans captured 31,000 votes, while the monarchists rallied 23,000 supporters.

Catalonia Republicans, although split on the autonomy issue, triumphed in Lerida and Francisco Cambo, the old Catalonian, was swept into the cortes. At Bilbao and other Basque towns, where another autonomy movement split their ranks, republicanism likewise triumphed. Although almost entirely republican and socialist, returned tremendous majorities for the king's enemies. Only four provinces, among those for which returns are available, stayed loyal—Cuenca, the Carlist fortresses, Burgos, Avila and Cadiz.

Of the monarchy it was a rout on every front. The entire province of Asturias, stronghold of the old conservative, went over to the enemy. The province of Asturias and Santander, the summer capitals, went Republican. So did San Sebastian, Guipuzcoa

RESIDENTS RUN AS WISCONSIN FORESTS BLAZE

Many Fighters Are Feared Trapped.

Halt Peshtigo Fire

Marinette, Wis., April 12.—(AP) — Three hundred and fifty men, battling doggedly as they retreated step by step for five miles, today finally stopped a forest fire within 20 feet of Peshtigo, Wis., preventing what was seen as a possible repetition of the famous Peshtigo fire of 1871, in which 1,000 lives were lost.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., April 12.—[Special.]—Hundreds of men late tonight were fighting forest fires sweeping over a wide area in northern Wisconsin and portions of the Upper Michigan peninsula.

Property damage estimated in the millions already has occurred in widely scattered parts of the region and it is feared that the lives of a score or more of fire fighters, now reported missing, have been lost.

Wallace, Mich., Destroyed.

One village, Wallace, Mich., eighteen miles north of Menominee, has been destroyed. Another, Kennedy, eight miles west of Park Falls, Wis., has been cut off from all communication with the outside world since noon and is believed to have burned.

At midnight the flames were at the outskirts of Crandon, Wis., a town of more than 1,600 population, and advancing rapidly on a front eight miles wide. Police Chief A. R. Tracy declared the whole city was doomed unless the wind changed before morning.

Farms, Hamlets Fire Swept.

Each of these towns was the center of a flame swept area, and all around them isolated farms and small hamlets were reported wiped off the landscape of the one time "big woods," the paradise of lumbermen a few decades ago and now grown up in bush and poplar and stunted evergreens, tinder dry from an almost snowless winter.

In the vicinity of Kennedy and Park Falls nearly all the roads were closed. Thirty miles north of Park Falls is Mellen, a town of 1,900 people. Between that point and Cayuga, a small village to the southwest, the road was closed, and forest rangers and local fire wardens were commanding all would be passers to retrace their route to escape the flames.

In Menominee, Mich., five small fires that crept in from the burning brush outside were extinguished by the local fire department. Almost herculean efforts were made by residents of Lena, a small village to the west of Oconto, in putting out fires after a few buildings had been burned.

Flee Doomed Village.

East of Crandon the village of Laona was reported doomed, with the inhabitants fleeing as the fire advanced within a half mile of their homes. The village of Wabeno, nearby, also was said to have been wiped out.

Still other cities suffered in the general conflagration that broke out in the woods, as the relative humidity fell this morning to about 25 per cent. Fire wardens always are fearful, under conditions such as now prevail, when the percentage drops below 40.

At Wisconsin Rapids damage of $200,000 was caused when grass fires blown by a gale from the south ignited a warehouse in which 500 barrels of oil were stored and the explosions which resulted spread the blaze to three more warehouses, six dwellings, four gasoline filling stations, and a number of other and smaller structures.

Fight with Garden Hose.

A tract a mile long and three blocks wide was fire swept, but the residents of the city succeeded in saving the central business section and most of the finer residences. With their own garden hose lines they battled to extinguish the sparks that fell from the warehouse fire.

At Chippewa Falls damage estimated at $100,000 was caused when some of the buildings on the grounds of the northern Wisconsin State Fair were burned.

There were also extensive areas flame swept in parts of Michigan. Damage was believed not so great there, however, as in Wisconsin and the vicinity of Menominee, as the country in the upper Michigan peninsula is not thickly settled.

Fires were discovered in the cut-over lands near Grand Rapids, in

Bares Letters of Harding on Suspected Spy

New York, April 12.—(AP)—Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach tonight announced he had obtained two letters, written by President Harding when senator, disclosing anxiety concerning a person called "Carrie," who was "under the eye of government agents" as a German informer.

The letters were directed to "My Dear Jim," and apparently were written in 1918. They were on senate stationery. The identity of "Jim" was not obtained, since the envelopes were missing.

Dr. Rosenbach also said he had the letter written to Calvin Coolidge by Mr. Harding in March, 1921, inviting the then Vice President to a cabinet meeting.

The source of the letters was not divulged by Dr. Rosenbach. He said he knew nothing more about them than appeared on the surface. One of the letters was dated April 22, the other May 1.

Text of Letter Given.

Following is the text of the letter concerning Carrie:

"April 22.

"My Dear Jim:

"Several days ago I wrote to Carrie along the lines you suggested, relating to the bond campaign, and got a reply which in substance said you ran your own affairs. I rather felt my appeal very futile.

"I wrote her again yesterday, very seriously and earnestly, warning her of impending dangers. She is under the eye of government agents, and it is highly urgent that she exercise great prudence and caution. I know, of course, that she is not deserving of surveillance, but feeling grows intenser, and prejudices are more pronounced as the casualty list grows, and I could beg of her to be prudent and above the impassioned prejudice of passing days. I don't mean to add to your worries, but it is too serious to remain silent.

"Perhaps You Can Appeal."

"She may tell you of the letter. Hope she shows it to you. Then you can add your bit. I can't appeal very effectively, though I have earnestly tried. I wonder if you could command her. Frankly, I doubt it. Perhaps you can appeal. It takes more than tact. But it is really serious. It is too bad, but she is under suspicion—all because of imprudent speech.

"She forgets we are in war—hellish war—and she forgets how Germany treats those who are against the government. It is time to think. If she is loyal and prudent the cloud may pass. She must be. If she isn't there is certain humiliation and distress and annoyance and embarrassment in store.

"I dislike to write, but I feel I must. I have written her even more urgently. Perhaps you had better not refer to this note, but I feel you must cooperate and save her from herself.

Yours, W. G. H."

Second Letter Quoted.

Text of second letter follows:

May 1.

"My dear Jim:

"I was glad to have your letter. It interested me very much. Of course, I know most of the stuff said about Carrie is all rot; in the main, an echo of prejudices excited before we entered the war. But inflamed passions and the madness of war prejudices are not just or discriminating. I know she is no German informer—she couldn't be. Yet these things have been reported. I never have doubted her ability to square herself with a reasoning government agent, but I haven't wished her to undergo the annoyance of such a visit.

"The greater peril is some unheeding, impassioned, self-appointed sponsors of justice and patriotism, who might humiliate or harm her. It is a pity that there can be such danger, but war is hell, and sanity does not always prevail. Hence the need of extreme prudence, caution, wisdom

LIBERALS MAKE FINAL PLEA FOR REPEALING BILL

Emmerson Urged to Sign Measure.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 12.—[Special.]—The final plea of the liberals to Gov. Emmerson—presented on the eve of the day when he is expected either to sign or veto the O'Grady-McDermott state prohibition law repealer—was made at the executive mansion in a Sunday hearing granted four Chicagoans affiliated with anti-dry organizations.

SEYMOUR WHEELER.

Only when this repealer becomes law, the deglegation said, can citizens of Illinois regain respect for law and order. If there is ten more years of prohibition, Seymour Wheeler of the Crusaders predicted, a revolution in this country will not be unlikely.

Mr. Wheeler was aided in the presentation of these views by Mrs. Clifford Rodman, Mrs. William Mitchell, and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler of the Illinois division, Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform. The latter two are co-chairmen of the division.

Final Hearing on Question.

This closed the hearings on the subject and was considered especially significant because the governor did not maintain the attitude of silent listening which characterized his conduct of both the wet and dry hearings given groups of legislators the last two weeks.

Today he took a hand in the discussion and asked many questions of his visitors, some of them at times seeming almost like cross-examination.

One incident which some present were inclined to interpret as an indication that the governor may veto the bill and hold that the results of last November's referendum was binding only on candidates for congress came during Mr. Wheeler's summary of the present situation. He made the statement that unless the bill is made law the Illinois Republican party was repudiating its own platform.

Asks About Platform.

"Have you a copy of that platform with you?" asked the governor.

"No, I haven't," Wheeler answered.

"Have you read it recently?" the governor wanted to know.

"No," was the reply. "But if it isn't in the platform the people have been misled."

The contention that the referendum applied only to the congressional candidates was that of Representative Roger F. Little [Rep., Champaign], the governor's floor leader in the house, when he appeared with other assembly drys to urge a veto week before last.

At the beginning of the hearing this morning the governor displayed irritation that the Chicago delegation came here today. They flew to Springfield yesterday to find him at Mount Vernon, his home, but they made arrangements to be heard this morning.

Party Goes to Mansion.

The party, with a handful of reporters accompanying them, filed into the office of the mansion about 11 a. m. and Mr. Wheeler began by saying that they were sorry to intrude upon Mr. Emmerson in his home.

"You knew," interrupted the governor, "that there was a hearing on Friday, didn't you?" The liberal legislators were before him that day.

"Not until I read of it in the newspapers," Wheeler replied.

"It's rather unusual for the governor to have a hearing on Sunday," Emmerson said. "There was ample time for you to be heard in the last ten days."

"We appreciate your having us here today," Mr. Wheeler told him.

Wheeler Opens Argument.

The commander of the Chicago Crusaders began his argument with the statement that the intelligent people of the country—those on the side of law, order, and decency—favored repeal of the prohibition laws.

"The money spent to corrupt enforcement authorities is simply stupendous," he said. "The police departments are honeycombed with graft. This is a time for decency, not just a matter of whether one is a wet or a dry. The racketeers are enacting huge profits during prohibition for them to

FATHER KILLS CHILD, 2, THEN WOUNDS WIFE

A domestic quarrel in the home of Alex Chuchla, 42 years old, 1901 East 91st street, ended in tragedy last night, when Chuchla shot and killed his 2 year old son, Walter, and shot his wife, Bernice, five times, wounding her probably fatally.

Chuchla, who operates a grocery in the front of his home, was arrested by Sergt. Harold McCoy of the South Chicago station when he returned after a half-hearted attempt to escape. Chuchla asserted he fired in self-defense after wresting the gun from his wife's hand.

Mrs. Chuchla denied this version. Her husband had been drinking, she said, and a quarrel arose over the paternity of the boy, Walter. Chuchla opened fire at her, she said, and a bullet struck and killed the baby. Mrs. Chuchla was struck in the head, the left lung, in the thigh, and twice in the right hand. She was taken to the South Chicago hospital. Two children, Helen, 11 years old, and Bruno, 17, were in the house at the time. A third, Constanty, was outside.

SHERIFF IN IOWA ASKS TROOPS IN COW TEST CRISIS

Tipton, Ia., April 12.—(AP)—Sheriff Foster Maxson of Cedar county late tonight formally requested Gov. Dan Turner to send state troops to Tipton so that tuberculin tests of a herd of cattle at the E. C. Mitchell farm may be made before 5 p. m. Monday.

In a telephone conversation with the governor, Sheriff Maxson said the situation was beyond his control and that state help is necessary if the state law requiring all herds of dairy cattle to undergo a tuberculin test is enforced.

Gov. Turner told the sheriff he would notify him by morning as to his decision.

Sheriff Maxson said that Gov. Turner told him objectors to the test had requested a conference with the governor Monday. The governor did not say whether he had granted the request.

ROBBERS HOLD UP NORTH SIDE CAFE; GET CASH, JEWELS

Six heavily armed robbers, all but one of them masked, marched into the Entre-Nous café at 27 East Ohio street early this morning. With them they took three taxicab drivers, whom they used as shields, apparently fearing that some one among the employes or the twenty guests of the place would start shooting.

None did, and after taking cash and jewelry amounting in all to $1,000 the band left. The taxicab drivers, who had been picked up as they waited for patrons in front of the café, were released with warnings not to follow.

Among those robbed were several women. All the patrons were compelled to stand with their hands raised while the robbery was in progress.

Joe Grein Gets His Old Place as City Sealer

Joe Grein, who was city sealer under Mayor Edward F. Dunne and Mayor Fred A. Busse, was appointed to the same position by Mayor Cermak shortly before the mayor left for Miami late Saturday night. Yesterday Grein said he would serve without pay to help the new mayor give the city hall a thorough cleaning up.

Speaking of his own part of the job as city sealer, Grein announced that he would start by overhauling his staff of deputies.

Demands Honest Deputies.

"The deputy city sealers, now under civil service, who are honest and conscientious and will give 100 per cent cooperation will get a break," said Mr. Grein, "but damn the one I find wrong or who stoops to petty larceny or tries to persecute the honest merchant. Whether this merchant be ever so big or small—they all look alike to me."

Under the administration of the weights and measures office by Daniel A. Serritella, a Capone lieutenant, cheating in foodstuffs cost the city of Chicago more than fifty-four million dollars in 1930, according to a recent statement by Assistant State's Attorney Harold M. Keele. Serritella was ousted with the other Thompson cabinet heads two days after the election.

Points to Former Earnings.

"From what I have read in the newspapers recently," said Grein in his statement to the public, "it looks like I have taken a real task on my hands. I have asked the mayor to command me to put the office of city sealer back to the same standard upon which I put it twenty-five years ago under Mayor E. F. Dunne and a part of the time under the late Fred Busse, who wanted to retain me during his administration.

"At that time the city sealer's office showed an earning to the taxpayers of approximately $50,000 a year, about 1,200 arrests, also revocations of licenses and plenty of fines, based solely on prosecutions, not persecutions. Weights, scales, and measures were confiscated by the car load and every few weeks on the lake front there was a bonfire made up of these thieving, cheating instruments.

Will Use "Big Stick."

"I am going to bring out the big stick I used during those days to teach short weight merchants how many ounces are in a pound and how many pounds to the bushel. With this thought in mind, I am asking the cooperation of our citizenship to send to the city sealer's office the names of these racketeers so we may clean them up quickly. Also I call on the kind women who, during my previous administration, organized Full Measure clubs to help me out in my work."

Grein has had a colorful career, starting as a newsboy. Later, he was a saloonkeeper. He was elected a county commissioner in his first venture into politics. After he left the sealer's office in the Busse administration he gave up the holding of public office. His return now is only for a short time, it is understood, and he will not accept any salary. Grein resides at the Hotel Sherman.

Mayor Cermak, en route to Florida, said Grein had accepted the temporary appointment to serve without pay "because the deplorable condition of the city sealer's office necessitated immediate attention."

Since the advent of prohibition Grein has been engaged in the malt and hops business and has built up a considerable trade in the sale of sauerkraut and tomato juices. Last May federal agents made a raid on his store at 210 West Madison street and seized a $50,000 stock of malt sirups and bottling materials for the purpose of making a test case under the Volstead act. He was freed.

hardly a business that doesn't pay them.

"The Republicans will only repudiate their platform if this bill is not signed," Wheeler stated.

The conversation then became general.

The Governor—Are you appealing to me from a party standpoint?

Wheeler—Well, governor, ninety-five per cent of my Republican friends—business men, men that I meet in clubs, and members of the American Legion—take that view.

The governor—Do you speak for the American Legion also?

Wheeler—No, only for certain members of it. I have been a lifelong Republican until last fall, when I voted Democratic on this issue alone. Illinois, which nominally has a Republican majority of 800,000, turned into the Democratic column.

The governor—Do you think that was caused by the wet and dry question? What effect would the repeal of the Illinois prohibition law have upon the moral and economic conditions of the state?

Another Link to Chain.

Wheeler—It would add another link to the chain of states that have thrown over prohibition.

Mrs. Wheeler—It would remove the danger of double jeopardy. Now a man can be convicted under both the federal and state laws.

The governor—It would tend, then, to show that Illinois repudiates the prohibition law?

Wheeler—Illinois has already repudiated the law in the platform of the Republicans adopted last August.

The governor—Have you a copy of that platform with you?

Wheeler—No, I haven't.

The governor—Have you read it recently?

Wheeler—No, but if it isn't in the platform, the people have been misled.

Refers to Mrs. McCormick.

The governor—Did you take the platform at 100 per cent when you didn't vote for Mrs. McCormick?

Mrs. Wheeler—Mrs. McCormick said she would abide by the referendum, but she was not for modification.

The governor—I recall very distinctly that last fall you [the party] wouldn't say that you would vote for her.

"In an economic and moral matter, the governor will not act as a partisan. He will not act from a political standpoint."

Mr. Wheeler—"It certainly is a political issue."

The governor—"I take off my hat to no man as far as my Republicanism is concerned. . . . This bill was made a party issue in the house of representatives."

Mrs. Wheeler—"It was Republican signatures that put the question of public policy on the ballot."

Mr. Wheeler—"Prohibition is the most vicious, iniquitous thing before the country today."

The governor—"Do you mean the 18th amendment, the Volstead act or the Illinois prohibition law?"

Mr. Wheeler—"The whole thing. The only thing that can stop it is for states, through referendums, to get away from it."

Mrs. Wheeler—"It is the only state law with the double jeopardy angle."

"Didn't Make These Laws."

The governor [smiling]—"Well, you understand I didn't make these laws."

Mrs. Mitchell—"No, governor, but we want you to unmake this one."

Mr. Wheeler—"The Republican party is also in jeopardy. This is a party pledge unless we've been misled."

Mrs. Mitchell—"The women's organization has been called everything. Apparently they think we are drunkards ourselves and want the saloon back. That is the one thing that we do not want. But each state should be allowed to make its own laws."

The governor—"State's rights, you mean?"

Mrs. Mitchell—"We want repeal."

The governor [smiling]—"You understand that I have no power to repeal or approve the national prohibition laws. As I understand you [to Mr. Mitchell] you believe moral conditions will be improved by repeal of the Illinois prohibition law?"

Mr. Mitchell—"They can't be worse."

The governor—"That isn't what I asked you."

Mr. Mitchell—"Well, if they can't be worse, there's a chance that they can be better. It's axiomatic."

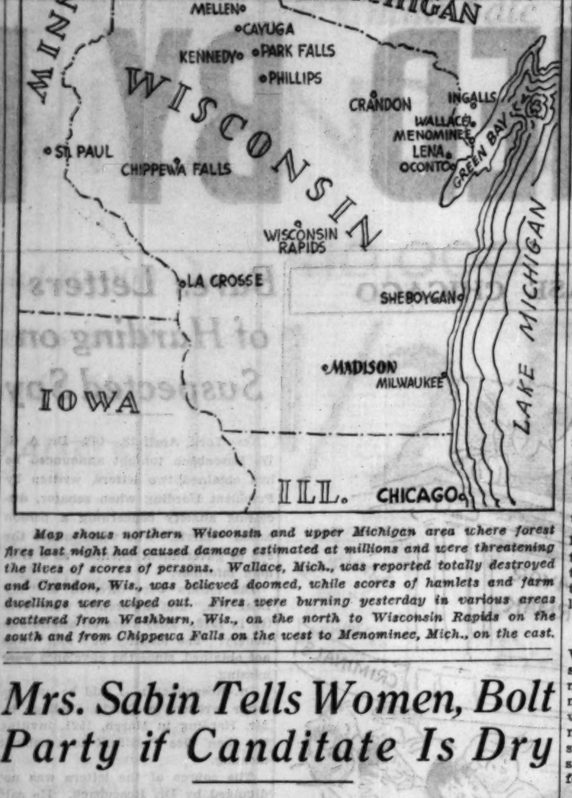
The hearing closed shortly after this and the Chicagoans flew back to Chicago.

The governor is expected to take action on the repealer tomorrow. He has before him the arguments of both sides—the liberal legislators having been heard at length Friday. The previous week, dry assemblymen made their pleas.

Whatever action he takes will be positive, it is believed.

When the O'Grady-McDermott bill passed the senate, close friends predicted that the governor would sign it, but this opinion has had some reversal during the last week. It is not considered likely that the governor will allow the bill to become a law without his signature.

FIRE SWEEPING NORTH WOODS



Map shows northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan area where forest fires last night had caused damage estimated at millions and were threatening the lives of scores of persons. Wallace, Mich., was reported totally destroyed and Crandon, Wis., was believed doomed, while scores of hamlets and farm dwellings were wiped out. Fires were burning yesterday in various areas scattered from Washburn, Wis., on the north to Wisconsin Rapids on the south and from Chippewa Falls on the west to Menominee, Mich., on the east.

Mrs. Sabin Tells Women, Bolt Party if Canditate Is Dry

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 12.—[Special.]—Bolt your party if it gives you a prohibitionist presidential candidate in 1932, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, the dimpling grandmother who is fighting for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, today advised all women who want to get prohibition talk off the national tongue.

MRS. CHARLES H. SABIN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The only way to get prohibition out of politics, argues Mrs. Sabin, is to put it so courageously into politics in the next presidential election that it will be on its way to settlement. And settlement, in her mind, means only one thing: Repeal of the eighteenth amendment, and the sending of the whole affair back to the individual states.

That's her main reason for urging women to bolt their party, whichever it turns out to be, "which evades this prohibition issue."

And her second reason, she admitted as she sat in her hotel discussing plans for the second annual convention of her Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, which opens here Tuesday, is that a prohibition candidate cannot be elected to the White House.

Quickly she was hedged about with the one question, "Do you call Mr. Hoover a prohibitionist?"

Swiftly she directed her questioners to "Ask Mr. Hoover."

But some body remarked that a few minutes earlier, in explaining why her group, unlike the several groups of dry women in session here, had not asked an audience at the White House, had said, "But the President has repeatedly said he is opposed to repeal."

When this was brought to her attention she made a direct answer. "Yes, I do call Mr. Hoover a prohibitionist."

Mrs. Henry Peabody, who moved from Massachusetts to Florida in search of more arid territory, she called "ludicrous" in her recent assertion that her group of drys represented 12,000,000 women.

"Thousands of members of our organization are also members of affiliated organizations in her group and these Mrs. Peabody delivers over wholesale. This sort of thing, a few women speaking for thousands of others for whom they have no right to speak, has been so overdone in this country that no one takes it seriously."

FOREST FIRES IN 2 STATES CAUSE MILLIONS LOSS

lower Michigan, one area of 800 acres being completely burned.

The last word from Kennedy came this morning. It was said then that four farm families had abandoned their homes, which were in flames, just outside the city limits. The whole population, aided by some volunteers, were out then. Communication was cut off soon afterward and rangers setting out from Park Falls found it impossible to proceed farther than Butternut creek, barely halfway to the stricken village.

Ashland, which was not directly threatened by the flames, sent a report that more than 500 men were in the woods in the Park Falls area and that another large group was striving to prevent any encroachment on Mellen.

Find Own Homes Burned.

The destruction of the village of Wallace came swiftly, with a sudden shift in wind direction, and while most of the inhabitants were several miles distant. They had gone to the village of Ingalls, Mich., a few miles north and barely across the Wisconsin line, to aid the townfolk there to save their homes. Returning, they found Wallace in ashes.

Included in the buildings lost at Wallace were fifteen residences, two cheese factories, two groceries, a restaurant, three garages, a church, and two gasoline stations. The Chicago and North Western station and eight box cars also burned.

Appeals for fire equipment from Menominee to aid at Ingalls had to be disregarded, but the North Western railroad sent a train with 200 men to help, and Sheriff Edward Reindl opened the jail doors and sent his eighteen prisoners, who volunteered their services.

Fire Fighters Trapped.

At Crandon the residents fought all day, the fire gradually closing in on them. One party of fire fighters, number unknown, was reported to have been hemmed in on all sides southwest of that place and fears were expressed for their safety. Every able bodied man in Crandon was out shortly before midnight and women and children were packing up family belongings for flight if it became necessary.

"The fire is coming ahead all the time on a 20 mile southwest wind," said Chief of Police Tracy. "It is the worst I have seen in twenty-five years in the woods country. There is no hope for Crandon unless the wind helps us."

Bucket brigades were operating at Mellen and truckloads of water were being hauled to them. Throughout the fire area, it was said, there was a shortage of water, the drought having dried up many of the streams and wells.

Most of the country involved once had one of the finest stands of evergreen and hardwood timber on the continent. In the last two or three decades it has grown up in second stand timber, some of which, especially around Oconto and Menominee, has been found merchantable for paper manufacture.

There was a rumor that the virgin stand of timber in the Moquah National forest, in the Mellen-Park Falls vicinity, had been attacked by the flames. If this reservation is burned, the loss there alone may run into millions.

Bomb Damages Building; Labor Trouble Blamed

A bomb was tossed from an automobile into the entrance of a building under repair at 4300 South Ashland avenue early this morning. Stanley Garron, owner of the structure, who lives in the rear, said that he had been having labor troubles while the work was in progress.

2 JUDGES AIDED PAROLE PLEA OF RONDOUT BANDIT

Other Officials Named as Urging Release.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Washington, D. C., April 12.—[Special.]—Two judges of the Cook county Superior court, one state representative, and a city councilman are listed by the United States board of paroles as among Chicagoans who submitted testimonial letters in behalf of James Murray, Rondout mail robber and Chicago ward politician, who will be released on parole from Atlanta penitentiary on May 26.

The names of those listed as having written testimonial letters to the board prior to its action in arranging for the release of Murray after the mail robber will have served six years, five months, and twenty-one days of an original twenty-five year term were disclosed as follows:

Judges Michael L. McKinley and W. J. Steffen of the Superior court, State Representative Frank Ryan, J. B. Bowler, city councilman; H. A. Blossatt, attorney at law; J. A. O. Preus, vice president of A. W. Alexander & Co. and former governor of Minnesota; R. A. Railton, Railton Grovery company, and the Rev. J. M. Kiely, pastor, St. Attracta's church, Cicero.

Report of Application.

The names of Chicago persons sufficiently interested in Murray to write testimonial letters in his behalf were contained in the parole board's lengthy report of the hearing on the mail robber's application for parole. Included in the report is a letter from United States District Attorney Johnson and statements to the effect that postal inspectors had promised Murray they would intercede for him in event that he would give them information which would result in turning up part of the $3,000,000 Rondout loot.

The board stated in explanation of its action in granting a parole that the investigation had shown that Murray had given valuable information to the government which resulted in the recovery of $324,500, that other defendants sentenced with him had been released, and that letters written to the board indicated that his industrial background up to shortly before his arrest had been of a "high order."

It emphasized that circumstances indicated the postal inspectors had entered into an agreement with Murray and had promised to exert their influence to obtain executive clemency and later a parole for him on condition that he give them information which would result in recovery of a part of the Rondout loot. It pointed out that Murray had carried out his part of the agreement and had later told the board that his action in turning informer had jeopardized his safety in and out of prison.

In conclusion, the board stated, it felt that it was up to it to do its part in carrying out the government promise.

Three Co-Defendants Released.

Arthur D. Wood, chairman, and Guy Bannard and Irvin B. Tucker, members, were present at the Washington hearing in the Murray case. Mr. Wood wrote the report, and all signed it. It opens with a résumé of the Rondout mail robbery of 1924 and the disposition made of the six defendants. It pointed out that Murray, sentenced to serve twenty-five years, still was in the penitentiary, while three of his co-defendants had been released.

"'Subject Murray,' said the board, 'is thirty-six years old and has a wife and two children who are dependent upon him for support. The record shows that upon leaving school he was employed by the Adams Express company, by the Pullman company as conductor, and as clerk of the Superior court of Cook county. In 1919 he gave up the sale of real estate and entered the trucking business, in which he was engaged at the time of arrest. This latter business, it is said, is being carried on by relatives. His industrial background while employed in the businesses heretofore mentioned may be said to have been of high order. Judge McKinley of the Superior court in a testimonial letter to the board says in part:

"'James J. Murray was, for nearly two years, a minute clerk in my court, during the years 1915 and 1916. My observation of him in that capacity justifies my saying that I found him alert, conscientious, punctual, and honest and very courteous to the court and lawyers.'

What Postal Inspectors Say.

"While the record discloses no previous criminal history, the original report submitted by the postal inspector in charge of the case says in part:

"'He is a well known ward politician and whisky runner in the city of Chicago and for a number of years has been engaged in violation of the prohibition laws and in handling stolen loot from members of the underworld.'

"Subject's institutional record during the period of confinement shows one report for infractions of the rules. He is at present on the clothing room assignment, considered one of the best, and in recognition of this service is occupying preferred sleeping quarters. An indication of trust and confidence."

The board then stated that Murray had testified during the hearing that he was labeled an "informer" by certain elements in the prison body, for his action in giving the government information. Murray told the board, it said, that his action had placed his own life in jeopardy, "both in and out of prison," and had made his prison status "extremely unpleasant, not to mention dangerous."

"The record shows," according to the board, "that Murray has employment upon release and that reputable citizens of Chicago will assist him during the adjustment period. The file, among others, contains testimonial letters from the following: J. A. O. Preus, vice president of the W. A. Alexander company, and former governor of Minnesota; H. A. Blossat, attorney at law; Judge Michael L. McKinley, Superior court; J. B. Bowler, city councilman; Frank Ryan, state representative; Judge W. P. Steffen, Superior court; the Rev. J. M. Kiely, pastor of St. Attracta's church, and R. A. Railton of Railton Grocery company.

FAMILY LIVING IN CHURCH WINS FIRST ENCOUNTER

Efforts of worshipers and trustees to hold services yesterday in the Hickory Corners Methodist church, three miles east of Antioch, were successfully resisted by Clarence Spiering, who has made the church his home. More than 600 men and women, whose automobiles clogged the road, gathered in the vicinity expecting to witness a physicial clash.

There was no violence, except in emphasis on words. At the appointed hour when the worshipers had announced they would hold services despite Spiering's dictum of defiance, several cars drew up, and a handful of men and women headed by Trustee Frank Edwards stepped out. Several approached Spiering, who stood at the door. They asked if they could conduct services.

"Not inside," Spiering returned. "Outside if you wish."

Sheriff Lester Tiffany of Lake county, who had appeared as a neutral observer, conferred with both sides. In addition to the wordy defiance of Spiering, it was pointed out, Spiering's child, Dorothy, was suffering with mumps, making an added peril. The worshipers withdrew, threatening to resort further to law this morning.

HERO MODEST ABOUT KILLING OF TWO BANDITS

Gold Coast Waiter Is German Veteran.

"Pouff! It was nothing. I just don't like robbery business."

Thus Frank Abler, head waiter at L'Aigion, the gold coast restaurant at 22 East Ontario street, modestly dismissed his exploit of killing two robbers and routing two others when the four attempted to hold up the establishment and 200 guests at 1 a. m. yesterday.

Frank, who is 35 years old and a bachelor, has been in the United States only five years and retains his clipped Teutonic accent. He lives with a brother at 2220 Burling street.

Has Army Discipline.

It was the iron discipline instilled during three years' service with the German army on the western front that transformed the placid waiter into an efficient executioner for a few brief minutes while dozens of other men stood in helpless bewilderment.

On reflection Frank was a bit surprised at his own marksmanship. Emerging from the basement with his automatic shotgun, which he uses in hunting, at the warning of robbery, he had found one bandit leaning over the money counter, covering the cashier, Mme. Augustine Andree, with a pistol.

Mme. Andree, 25 years old and weighing about 90 pounds, also displayed cool nerve. With herself and the robber in range of the head waiter's gun, she caught Frank's signal and shrank back out of line of fire.

First Bandit Is Killed.

The shotgun roared and the robber fell wounded in the right shoulder. He was able, however, to return the waiter's fire, but his pistol shots went wild. Three more blasts from Frank's shotgun killed the bandit.

Meanwhile two other robbers were in the main dining room, warning the guests to be quiet. The interchange of shots in the hallway sent them scurrying among the tables to the far side of the dining room.

His first charge of ammunition exhausted on the first bandit, Frank had raced to the basement. Two of the surviving robbers had now lined up the guests for a search, the fourth waiting at the wheel of their car.

Goes Into Action Again.

Once more Frank went into action. Pacing to the door of the main dining room, he raised his gun, firing an instant sooner than another bandit, who had glimpsed his advance over his shoulder.

With a charge of buckshot in his chest, the robber fell. The third robber employed this interval in creeping around the wall to the doorway to escape and was flashing past the head waiter when Frank fired again, perhaps wounding him. He and the driver escaped in the car.

A few minutes later Lieut. George De Mar and a police squad arrived, to stand guard over the bodies until a deputy coroner came. The bodies were taken to the county morgue and there identified as those of James Hirsch, 34 years old, 2311 West Jackson boulevard; and Charles E. Nelson, 26 years old, 3542 West Lake street.

CONTINUE HUNT FOR EVIDENCE IN RUM RING RAIDS

New Orleans, La., April 12.—(AP)—Federal authorities today continued to assemble evidence in connection with the uncovering yesterday of a gulf coast liquor syndicate, alleged to be distributing Canadian liquor in the United States through the Mississippi and Louisiana gulf coast.

Six men held under heavy bond and said by United States District Attorney Edmond J. Talbot to be the ring leaders, are to be arraigned tomorrow. These men, with the operator of a high powered radio station in New Orleans, who, also was arrested, are charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

Talbot said the Canadian government's tightening of its guard on the border had led prohibition authorities to believe liquor running would be transferred to the gulf coast area. Months of investigation finally enabled authorities here to tap the telephone wires of the leaders, he said, and resulted in exposure of the ring.

Takes Liquor as Part Pay for Farm; Arrested, Freed

Springfield, Mo., April 12.—[Special.]—Three gallons of whisky featured in a farm trade near here and resulted in a liquor charge being filed against Mrs. Margaret Collison, it was revealed in federal court here last night. She pleaded guilty to the charge but was release by Judge Al L. Reeves when it was brought out that her husband had accepted the liquor as part payment of a tract of land and was trying to get rid of it when the federal agents heard of it and purchased the supply for $18.

PENNSY RAILWAY TO ELEVATE 1½ MILES OF TRACK

South Side Project to Cost $3,285,000.

Elevation of the tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad's Englewood connecting railway between Halsted street and Hoyne avenue, a distance of a mile and a half along the south side of 63th street, will be begun on May 1, the railroad announced yesterday. The project will cost an estimated $3,285,000 and is scheduled for completion by the end of 1934.

The ordinance for the track elevation improvement was passed by the city council in 1912. Now, after nearly twenty years, various difficulties being adjusted, the railroad is prepared to go ahead with the improvement.

This improvement includes the construction of 23 full street width subways for all the streets between Halsted and Hoyne, except at Hoyne, where only a ten foot pedestrian subway will be provided.

New Bridges to Be Built.

New railroad bridges also will be erected at Emerald, Union and Lowe avenues, Wallace street and Normal boulevard and over the "Y" tracks at Stewart avenue.

The tracks between Halsted street east to Stewart avenue were elevated about 25 years ago, but at Halsted street the tracks start down to grade level, which is reached at Morgan street. It is between Halsted street and the beginning of the Pennsylvania yards at Hoyne avenue that the elevation and subway construction is scheduled to take place.

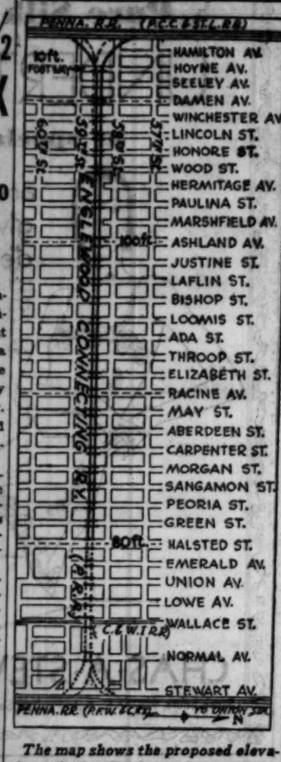
Railway to Pay Costs.

The entire cost of the improvement is to be borne by the railroad and the project will provide work for hundreds of men. I. W. Gerr, chief engineer of the road at Chicago, will be in charge of the work and said he proposed to push it vigorously to completion.

FOUND DEAD IN STREET.

Robert McCormick, 39 years old, believed to have been a homeless wanderer, was found dead yesterday in front of 808 South Halsted street.

TRACKS GOING UP



The map shows the proposed elevation of the Englewood connecting railways between the Pittsburgh, Chicago and Fort Wayne and the Panhandle lines of the Pennsylvania railroad. The part already elevated is shown by a dotted line. The 32 new subways to be built are indicated. The line is now at grade between Hamilton avenue and Halsted street.

URGES REMOVAL OF DRIVE TRACKS FOR CIVIC GOOD

Park Officer Asks Surface Lines to Drop Fight.

An appeal for speed in the settlement of the dispute over the removal of the street car tracks in Lake Shore drive between Ohio street and Chicago avenue was made in a letter sent yesterday to Guy Richardson, an official of the Chicago Surface Lines, by Sheldon Clark, vice president of the Lincoln park commission.

Civic pride should be sufficient inducement, the letter said, to discard legal hair-splitting in favor of a public spirited program which will adjudicate the ten year old controversy.

The park board charges the tracks will interfere with traffic when the new $10,000,000 outer drive bridge development is completed. The controversy has been before the Illinois commerce commission for eight years and testimony has not been completed. The hearing is to be resumed on Thursday.

"Promote Interest of All."

"The public has waited long and patiently for this great outer drive improvement which should be as much of a matter of pride to you and your associates as to any other group of citizens," the letter to Mr. Richardson said. "This improvement will facilitate the movement of automobile traffic between the north and south sides and will beautify the shore line.

"Without going into the legal merits and technicalities as to whether former Mayor Thompson and the park board had any right to grant your company the concession to lay tracks over the boulevard strip they now occupy, it seems to me that you and I should both be concerned not so much with any personal or selfish rights or claims, but rather as members of this great community we should be willing and endeavor to do everything to promote the interests of all its people.

Sees Gain in Good Will.

"In suggesting a magnaminity on your part in behalf of the public good, your company will be more than repaid in good will for any sacrifice it might make in coöperating with the park board in this matter."

The tracks in Lake Shore drive were laid under a temporary permit as provided in a "gentleman's agreement" made in 1321 during the Pageant of Progress to give the surface lines access to the Municipal pier.

Police Halt Church Fight Over New Colored Pastor

An attempt to prevent the new pastor of the Negro Ebenezer Baptist church, 4501 Vincennes avenue, from delivering his first sermon yesterday resulted in a fight among members of the congregation. The disturbance was halted by police squads. The trouble started when Curly Beatie, 4235 Calumet avenue, lunged as though to attack the Rev. J. H. Lorenza Smith as he entered the pulpit to address his new congregation. Beattie was severely bruised by parishioners who went to the rescue of the minister.

CRANK HUNTED FOR WRITING 11 EXTORTION NOTES

Fails to Carry Out Kidnap Threats.

With his threats of kidnaping and torture unfulfilled by the extortionist who demanded $50,000 from each of eleven society notables in letters mailed last Tuesday, the prospective victims yesterday became convinced that they were being pestered by a harmless crank or some one with a perverted sense of humor.

MRS. J. NEWTON PERRY. [Moffett Photo.]

Acting Police Commissioner John H. Alcock reported his department had made no progress toward tracing the culprit, as did K. P. Aldrich, chief postoffice inspector, and the police of East Chicago, Ind.

The letter writer had instructed his prospective victims to mail the checks in care of general delivery at East Chicago, using the aliases of William C. Edison Jr., George M. Madrid, and Henry Wolfe.

Recipients of the threats, it was learned, were the following: Mr. and Mrs. Philip D. Armour, Mrs. Elisabeth Reid, H. Godfrey Haggard, the British consul; Col. A. A. Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Ransom Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. I. Newton Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Strotz, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, Edwin D. Krenn, and Mrs. Carroll H. Sudler.

Hunt Bridegroom; Bride and Pastor Wait in Vain

A police message was sent out last night asking that search be made for a missing bridegroom-to-be. He is Albert Ford, 25 years old, living at the Milshire hotel, 2526 Milwaukee avenue. The waiting bride-to-be is Miss Alice Meimer, 20 years old, 2853 Milwaukee avenue. The ceremony was set for 7 p. m. Saturday. The Rev. John Graham, her family, and guests were in attendance. But Ford failed to show. He was still missing last night.

GIVE EXTRA COMFORT TO THIS RARE WING CHAIR

Special.. $69

Covered in your choice of 10 cheerful, copper plate chintzes

WING chairs, allowing you to rest your head against the convenient corners, are perhaps the most comfortable chairs you can own, but most wing chairs are too large and bulky for the modern apartment.

One of the many rare features of this interesting wing chair, built by Danersk, is its cozy size. It will fit nicely into the smallest room. And yet its comfort is enormous. Its general design and the moulding of the legs are in the manner of Chippendale, whose wing chairs are famous, but we have made the slant of its back greater, so that it provides much more ease than do wing chairs of old.

The next rare feature of this chair is the fact that we have stuffed its cushions entirely with goose down—making its comfort still more unusual. This is a luxury that not one ordinary chair in a hundred can equal.

There are many ways of stuffing cushions: with kapok (a sort of cotton from Java), with feathers, with chicken down, turkey down, duck down, goose down.

Of all these, goose down is by far the springiest, fluffiest and most expensive; to sit on a cushion so stuffed is to feel as if you were floating on an ocean of ease.

Furthermore, the goose down in the cushions of this little wing chair is not ordinary goose down, taken from 5 or 6 lb. China geese, but comes from the 10 or 12 lb. corn-fattened Missouri geese whose breasts are covered with the softest, fluffiest, springiest down the world knows.

Come and sit in this extraordinarily comfortable chair, and see what a vast sense of well-being you will experience. You can have it covered in your choice of 10 charmingly colored, copper print chintzes—including interesting reproductions of old-time woven coverlets from Kentucky.

Hundreds of other pieces for living room, dining room, bedroom are now here . . . moderately priced and well worth inspecting.

YOUTH SOARS TO NEARLY 4 MILES IN TINY AIRPLANE

Probably Sets Record for Midget Class.

Detroit, Mich., April 12.—[Special.]—Darwin at the National Aircraft show at the city airport today climbed Kenneth Scholter, 19 year old flyer, soar skyward in an attempt to break the light plane altitude record, an attempt which succeeded if the official check of his barograph shows the same reading recorded at the field. Scholter, a Hudson, O., youth, climbed to 19,500 feet with a 30 horsepower Aeronca monoplane, according to the unofficial check of his altitude instrument.

The previous record for a midget airplane, held in France, was 17,037 feet. Scholter himself previously had established an official record of 16,254 feet in the same type of ship he used today.

The flight was observed by Ray Cooper, manager of the National Aircraft show and an observer for the National Aeronautical association. Mr. Cooper will send the barograph to Washington to be checked by the association officials there.

Ruth Nichols Delays Speed Test.

Ruth Nichols, Rye, N. Y., aviatrix, did not fare as well as the 19 year old Ohio midget plane operator. Dreary air delayed her attempt at Grosse Isle to set a new air speed record for women.

Planning to speed over a three kilometer straightaway course at the Grosse Ile airport, Miss Nichols found herself bucking a spanking wind, and for that, necessarily at a low altitude, was hazardous. She examined the course, laid out along a railroad track, defined more clearly from the air by bed sheets laid on the ground, in another plane while her borrowed monoplane stood ready for the flight.

As the sun dropped lower and the wind kept blowing, she decided she would not make the attempt until tomorrow. Her hope is to better the 181.18 mile an hour clip made over the same course July 6 by Miss Amelia Earhart Putnam. The fastest official record by an American woman is 194.19 miles an hour, a record set by Florence Lowe Barnes at Los Angeles last August.

An attraction which did not make its appearance until today was the Curtiss Delphin, a twin motored amphibian.

Claims Outside Spin Record.

Charlotte, N. C., April 12.—(AP)—Freddy Lund, barnstorming airplane pilot, claimed a record here today when he brought his ship back to earth after making four complete turns in an outside spin exhibition.

Lund performed his gruesome flying feat over the Charlotte airport, starting his first downward spin 4,100 feet in the air.

The flyer will leave here tomorrow with Mrs. Lund, herself a licensed pilot, for the National Air show at Detroit.

FEAR KIDNAPERS MAY HAVE SLAIN MONROE BREWER

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Monroe, Wis., April 12.—[Special.]—Authorities here tonight were notified that highway police in Stephenson county, Illinois, had begun a search of old barns and abandoned farmhouses around Freeport, in the belief that Fred J. Blumer, Monroe brewer, who was kidnaped Thursday night for $150,000 ransom, might have been murdered.

Blumer was abducted here and, according to a message from his kidnapers, taken to Freeport. Police of both cities have since conducted inquiries. Fears of the Illinois officials were scouted by Monroe and Green county, Wisconsin, authorities. It is generally believed Blumer still is alive.

An incident occurred on the outskirts of Monroe tonight that convinced detectives efforts at negotiations were being made. It was reported by an unidentified motorist. He was driving to Clarno, Wis., when he noticed the Blumer family car ahead of him. The headlights were flashing dim and brilliant alternately. When the driver, a man known as Durgin, an employé of the Blumer brewery, observed the motorist behind he discontinued changing his lights.

IDEAL WEATHER SENDS A MILLION OUT ON HIGHWAYS

Enjoy Spring Greenery on Trips to South.

BY HAL POUST.

Sunny skies, with the temperature in the seventies, drew 400,000 automobiles with a million passengers onto the highways of the metropolitan area yesterday. The ideal weather also crowded the city's parks, sent picnickers into the forest preserves, filled the golf links, and even a few donned bathing suits to sun themselves on the beaches.

During a week of spring weather city dwellers had itched to get out of doors. With Sunday fulfilling their hopes, Chicago spent the holiday on the highways.

An unusually large portion of the metropolitan traffic turned southward, following routes recommended in the automobile section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. They enjoyed a countryside two or three weeks in advance of Chicago, a heavy growth of spring grass, the trees budding and the early wild flowers abloom.

Report Heavy Traffic.

Desk Sergeant Hopper of the Kankakee police said that the traffic men reported seeing more Chicago automobiles than during the height of the touring season in other years. William B. Guthrie, manager of the Turkey Run inn in the Indiana state park, 158 miles south of Chicago, said that 75 per cent of his Sunday crowd was from the metropolitan area.

"I can't tell how many of them came here on THE TRIBUNE'S recommendation," said Mr. Guthrie, "but I've overheard many comments about the story in the Sunday paper."

Filling station employés at Grant Park and Momence, in Kankakee county, reported a large number of Chicago autos, and one attendant at a station south of Kankakee said more than a dozen of his customers remarked they were taking THE TRIBUNE'S suggested tour to the University of Illinois campus at Urbana.

A similar report of many autos from Chicago came from a filling station proprietor at Cook, Ind., on U. S. 41.

Test New Wide Pavements.

The touring bureau of the Chicago Motor club reported it received a number of requests for further details about the trip south outlined in the automobile section.

The outpour of Sunday drivers gave the forty foot roads built last year their first test under heavy traffic. Cars were moving from forty-five to fifty-five miles an hour where last spring on narrow pavements they were held to twenty and thirty miles an hour. Because of the greater speed the Chicagoans rode farther from the city.

The great majority of motorists have learned to stay in the outer lanes on the forty foot roads, leaving the center lane free for passing. Evidence is the oil stain on the outer lanes, where the entire width of the pavement was laid at the same time.

Few Stay in Center.

However, there were still a few who loitered at thirty or thirty-five miles an hour in the center of the wide pavements, forcing drivers anxious to reach a destination to make the illegal pass to the right of the slow machine or to swing to the left of the center of the pavement, which is equally, if not more, hazardous.

A few of these road hogs were in dilapidated old machines that could not travel at a reasonable rate with safety. However, most of them were thoughtless motorists, preoccupied with something other than their driving, apparently unaware of the hazard created by their blocking the center of the pavement. The conduct of a few might be explained by ignorance, although there are frequent signs directing, "Use outer lane except for passing."

With the vast majority adhering to the common sense rule of the road, the forty foot roads proved highly valuable in handling the heavy traffic, although their efficiency was minimized considerably by the lack of grade separations at the intersections of important routes.

JACK ZUTA—ONE OF SENSATIONS IN LINGLE CASE

The Story of Vice Chief's Life and Death.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

Ninth installment of "The Solution of the Lingle Murder."

CHAPTER X.

Jack Zuta was a man more despised than he was hated, and of a certainty seated across the table from him. The he was hated by many. His was an ancient profession, but age could never bring it dignity, and its members have been the scum of civilizations.

He made his living out of women's shame.

On the 25th of March, 1930, Zuta was sitting in a chair in the office of John Stege, then the commander of the detective bureau, and Stege was pander, a short, dark man of about 40 years, showed a characteristic attitude of fawning humility. Stege berated him for his sordid calling, and then the detective chief said:

"You are a doomed man. I've told that to 14 other hoodlums who have sat on that same chair you are now sitting on and all of them are dead."

Verily it was prophecy.

Profits Provided by Zuta.

The wonder of it is that Jack Zuta lived as long as he did, and the story is that Zuta's was one of the keenest business minds of all of them, and his loathsomeness could be endured for the profits he provided.

He has been called heretofore the "brains" of the Lingle murder. He was a prominent figure in the investigation and his murder was a sensational feature.

John U. Zuta, as he called himself, was born in Russia, in peasantry, and there the family name was said to have been "Zoota." He was a Jew. He came to America and then to Chicago, and seventeen years ago he was peddling from house to house here, peddling wares from a basket.

He became a junk dealer, setting himself up on the near west side. He prospered at this, and then he rented a cheap hotel. Vice became his trade. He bought the hotel, and then another, and before long he had a string of bawdy places, all of them on the west side, scattered about the flophouse district along West Madison street.

Zuta Ousted, but He Returns.

Zuta went along for years, profitably, and then his affluence attracted the attention of gangsters, and Mike de Pike Heitler and Patsy Tardi, with a crowd of hoodlums, drove him out of his resorts and out of Chicago.

The shifting lines of the Chicago gangs, so frequently altered by murder, permitted Zuta to return, and he became an ally of the Aiello brothers and Bugs Moran, bosses of the north side gang. Zuta continued to ply his bawdy art, but he branched out, with the strong support of the gang, into gambling enterprises.

Before long he had brought a royal income into the gang coffers, but he also brought dissension in its midst. There were reports that some of the leading heavy men of the north side gang hated Zuta, upbraided Moran and the Aiellos for letting him in, and refused to work at his call.

Police Arrest Vice Lord.

On June 30, 1930, which oddly enough is the same day that Grover Dullard was arrested, Jack Zuta was taken into custody by police from the detective bureau. With him was Albert Bratz, whose real name is Eli Zoota, and who is Zuta's cousin and was his vice lieutenant. On the same night Solly Vision, another of Zuta's henchmen, was brought in, and with him was a woman, who gave her name as Leona Bernstein.

Chief of Detectives Norton notified Pat Roche of Zuta's capture, and the following day sent his four prisoners to Roche's office. There Zuta maintained his usual stolid, but at the same time whining, attitude, and he declared that he knew nothing of who had killed Lingle, or why. But his furrowed brow and harried eyes seemed to give evidence of a terrible fear.

There have been reports that Zuta "talked" that day; that he whispered something to Roche and Rathbun concerning the Lingle crime. They are not true.

TARGET OF GANG GUNS

Zuta was returned to the detective bureau, and meantime the unfailing writ of habeas corpus had been filed on his behalf, so Chief Norton was forced at 10:25 that night to book Zuta and his companions and to permit their release on bail.

The bail was quickly arranged and Zuta was told to go. He turned slowly, hesitated, and then left the office and descended, with his comrades, to the lobby of the police building. The building is at State and 11th streets, and accordingly it is south of that Madison street boundary line which then marked off the territory of Capone, south, and of the north side gang, north. Zuta was in the land of Capone.

He glanced furtively out of the door to the street. Darkness. Then a frenzy of fear seemed to come over him, and he looked about as if for help. Lieut. George Barker, who had arrested Zuta, was just leaving the building, and Zuta, face craven, stopped him.

Policeman Offers Protection.

"Lieutenant," he pleaded, "I don't want to go outside. I got it that a mob is gunning for me. I'll never get home alive. You took me from a safe spot. Now get me back there, will you?"

Barker smiled a bit disdainfully at the apparent cowardice of the man.

"So they've got you worried, eh?" he said. "Well, I'm going over toward the loop, and I'll take you far enough so you can get a cab."

Zuta showed his relief and climbed into the back of Barker's car, making

Bratz and the Bernstein woman sit on either side of him. Vision got in the front seat next to Barker, and the latter drove off, north in State street.

Zuta peered anxiously from the rear window, and suddenly, as the car crossed Quincy street, just inside the loop, he called out hoarsely: "We're being followed!"

Fires Into Police Auto.

Just then a dark blue sedan swung alongside Barker's car on the right. A nattily dressed young man with a pistol in hand stepped on the running board and fired a succession of shots into the rear of the policeman's car. Another gunman reached a pistol through the window of the other automobile and fired toward where Zuta was now crouching in a huddle with his companions.

Lieut. Barker had jammed on his brakes and stopped, and he leaped from his car to the street, in the full glare of the bright lights of State street, and began to return the fire of the gunmen. He drew their fire upon himself, and meanwhile Zuta, Bratz, Vision, and the woman crawled from the Barker car and made their escape.

The gangsters' car then was rushed up State street. One of the gunmen threw a revolver to the street. Meanwhile, another policeman, William Smith, ran up, and was about to shoot Barker, who was in citizens' clothes. But the lieutenant called out his identity and showed his star, and then he and Smith jumped into Barker's car and took up a pursuit of the gangsters.

Smoke Screen Blocks Chase.

But the would-be killers' car was leaving a heavy stream of smoke behind, and an effective smoke screen, reaching from wall to wall of the State street skyscrapers, made pursuit impossible. This was a new wrinkle in the warfare of the gangs.

Two men had been caught in the crossfire of the battle, both being hit by the gangsters' bullets. One was Elbert Lusader, a motorman, who was killed as he stood by the controller of his street car, and the other was Olaf Svenske, an employé of the Standard club of Chicago, who was wounded in the arm.

Zuta, Bratz, Vision and the woman had been ordered to appear for trial on disorderly conduct charges at the police court the following morning. Bratz was the only one who appeared, and he said none of them had been wounded. Zuta was never again seen alive by the police, although a wide search for him was made, so that he might be called upon to name the men who had attacked him.

A Lingle Murder Theory.

It seemed plausible that Zuta had been attacked as a consequence of the murder of Lingle, and there were many conjectures as to whether Zuta's assailants were men involved with him in the Lingle killing, who were seeking to silence him, or whether they sought to avenge the murder of the reporter.

It was then that the false whispers arose that Zuta had confessed something to Rathbun and Roche, and that this had impelled the action of those who would have killed him.

Zuta had gone into seclusion, and there was some question as to who would find him first, the police or the gangsters.

The honors went to the gangsters.

ZUTA IS MURDERED

On the evening of Aug. 1 the jingle of a mechanical piano sounded through the open windows of a quiet resort on the shore of Upper Nemahbin lake, near Delafield, Wis. Inside on a dance floor a half dozen couples were waltzing about.

Beside the piano stood a short and swarthy man, and from time to time, as the piano ended a tune, he dropped nickels so that the merriment might continue.

He was a newcomer to the hotel, who had registered under the name of "J. H. Goodman of Aurora, Ill.," several days before. He seemed of a good natured sort, but for some reason, when he sat in the dining room, he always chose a seat facing the door.

Two automobiles had been driven up to the resort, but no heed had been paid by those inside. A main highway wound past the resort, along the shore of the lake, and many cars were passing by.

Gunmen Invade Hotel.

Five men strode into the hotel, each bearing in his hands a shotgun or revolvers, and one had a machine gun. They encountered the owner of the place and his barkeeper in the barroom.

"What's this, a joke?" asked the owner.

"Stick 'em up or you'll be killed," was the reply. "Don't move." The resort keeper inadvertently took a step, and immediately a bullet struck the ceiling and another hit the floor. "We're not fooling," the leader of the intruders said.

They were striding along as this scene was enacted, and in a moment they spotted "Goodman." He had just dropped another nickel and was turning when a bullet crashed into his mouth. He tried to move to escape. More bullets found marks in his head and body. He said no word, his knees sagged and he fell to the floor. Two gunmen walked to his side and fired several times into the prostrate body. There was to be no escape this time.

Threaten Dancers with Guns.

The five killers brandished their weapons in the faces of the dancers, warning them not to move. They walked back through the barroom and out into the night air, where they encountered a group coming in from the beach, some of them in bathing attire.

"Get back!" one of the gunmen shouted, and the vacationists faded before the row of guns. The gangsters entered their own automobiles, one of which bore license plates later found to have been stolen from a Chicago taxicab, and drove swiftly away.

Learn of Mystery Men.

The body of "Goodman" was taken to Waukesha, where it was soon learned that "Goodman" was Jack Zuta, the pander, come to his end at last.

Investigator Roche was notified, and with Assistant State's Attorney Rathbun and THE TRIBUNE reporter, hastened to Waukesha. Joining with District Attorney Herman Salen and Sheriff Phil Herbrand of Waukesha county, the Chicago investigators learned that nine or ten men, with more or less mystery about them, had been living for a week in a cottage three miles from the scene of Zuta's murder.

These men were suspected as the slayers, and an effort to identify them was launched. District Attorney Salen found himself handicapped by the fear which seemed to grip the witnesses to the murder, and with difficulty he obtained from them descriptions of the assassins.

Alphonse Capone was the host to a hundred of his followers, meeting about a banquet board at the Western hotel in Cicero, on the night that his enemy, Zuta, went to his death. Mr. Capone has a habit of being in prominent places when his enemies die suddenly. He was celebrating St. Valentine's day on his estate in Florida when the seven north side gangsters died on North Clark street.

A Tale About Scarface Al.

There hangs another tale on the murder of Zuta which concerns this Scarface Al.

In May of 1930 a fusillade of shots was fired at a man believed to be Leo Mongoven, the bodyguard of Bugs Moran. A few minutes later a man was arrested as he jumped into an automobile, and he was found to be Sam Hunt, a gunman known to the police as one of the best handymen of Al Capone.

Hunt was toting a golf bag, and a search of the bag disclosed a shotgun, a revolver, and ammunition. The weapons were delivered to Coroner Bundesen, and the coroner sent them for examination to Lieut. Col. Calvin Goddard, the ballistics expert.

Col. Goddard noted that the Capone gangsters had achieved a novel method of destroying the numbers on a weapon. Where the number had been the marks of a steel punch appeared, and the impression left by the punch was a cross, like this: "‡".

Clews to Capone Gangsters.

Dr. Bundesen also obtained, and delivered to Col. Goddard, the weapon which had been thrown away, on State street, by the men who participated in the first attack on Zuta. The same peculiar punch mark had effaced the numbers on this weapon.

This was taken by the coroner as proof that Zuta had been the target of Capone gangsters. It also tended to show that as Capone men had instigated the first attempt at Zuta's death, they must have traced their enemy to his Wisconsin hideout and there performed a certain job of his murder.

But there was further scientific proof. A bullet taken from the body of Zuta was examined by Col. Goddard and he announced that it was of a definite type which was used almost exclusively in a certain model weapon—namely: a .38 caliber revolver mounted on a .45 caliber frame. This was the model of gun seized from the Capone gangster, Sam Hunt.

GUNS ARE TRACED

By a secret process, Col. Goddard learned the numbers of the Hunt weapon and of the gun used in the Zuta attack and through the manufacturer of the revolvers Coroner Bundesen learned that both guns had been sent in a large shipment to a Chicago hardware and sporting goods store.

At that store it was learned by the coroner's investigators, Francis Donohue and Charles Reynolds, that the two guns were shipped by express at the same time with 23 others to the "Gary Mail Order House." The trail of the guns was then followed to Gary, where the investigators discovered that the package of revolvers had been called for at the express office by a man who signed the receipt: "Gary Mail Order House, by H. A. Darling."

Darling, according to the express company employés, had called on the telephone the morning the package came and later arrived to take it away with him.

Find His Office in Gary.

Donohue and Reynolds learned that an "H. A. Darling" had leased an office in Gary under the name of the Gary Mail Order House and had paid a month's rent in advance. Darling was about for a few days, but after the date the guns were received he never appeared again.

Information came to the detectives that "Darling" was Harold A. Denman, a former member of the Cook county highway police force and a son of Maj. Albert A. Denman, who had been chief of the county force and had also served as a personal bodyguard for Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes, former Vice President.

Pictures of young Denman were taken to the express company and to the renting agents for the office building used by "Darling," and the detectives reported the picture of Denman had been identified as that of the man known as "Darling."

It was learned that Denman had a cottage in the sand dunes near Miller, Ind., and neighbors reported that Denman was sometimes visited there by suspicious looking characters.

Ted Newberry in Picture.

One resident said he had seen a man whom he knew to be Ted Newberry, the one time ally of the north side gang who had deserted to the ranks of Capone, in Denman's company, and from this the coroner's aids concluded that Denman had obtained the weapons for Newberry and for the Capone gang.

Meanwhile there were reports from Wisconsin that pictures of Ted Newberry had been identified as those of one of the slayers of Zuta. And Newberry had been going about the Chicago north side since the Zuta murder announcing to the keepers of speakeasies, some of whom reported it to the police, that henceforth there was a new czar of the north side gang, and that he, Newberry, by the grace of Al Capone, held the scepter.

It seemed that he did. Zuta was dead. The Aiellos had fled the wrath of Capone. Bugs Moran also had read the writing on the wall and was reported to be hunting in Minnesota.

The north side gang was no more. Murder and traitorism and fear had doomed it, and Capone was in the gangland of the north.

The pattern of the Zuta murder was fairly complete, with the ruthless artistry of Capone behind it. But there was one more chapter to the story.

Danny Stanton, a south side beer runner who had recently joined the multitude of hoodlums now yielding to the rule of Capone, was arrested on Sept. 16 with his chauffeur, Edgar Smith, as they were driving on the south side. A loaded .38 caliber revolver was found in a side pocket of Stanton's car.

Stanton and Smith were arraigned on charges of vagrancy, and their case was continued. Meanwhile the revolver was sent to Col. Goddard, who fired specimen bullets from it, and began to compare them with fatal bullets in recent gang murder cases. He came to the bullets which had killed the vice monger Zuta, and fitted one of them, with the specimen bullet from Stanton's gun, under his specially built microscope.

Match Zuta Death Bullets.

They matched! This weapon taken from the gangster Stanton was used in the murder of Zuta! Col. Goddard made a positive report to Coroner Bundesen, who then called in District Attorney Salen. Careful plans were laid to prepare the case. It was agreed that no announcement of the discovery would be made until Stanton again appeared in court, and that then an effort would be made, without exciting the gangster's suspicion, to have Stanton admit that the weapon seized was his property.

But their plans were upset by the Chicago Herald and Examiner, which on Sept. 23 published the information that the Stanton weapon had been identified in the Zuta murder, and that Stanton was being sought for the crime. The opportunity for having Stanton admit ownership of the weapon, especially on the day of the killing of Zuta, was lost.

The Capone gangster appeared for trial on the vagrancy charge—he had posted a bond guaranteeing his appearance—and he was then arrested and charged with the murder of Zuta. He waged a three months' battle against extradition to Wisconsin, but in the end he and his chauffeur were ordered by Judge Philip J. Finnegan to be taken to Waukesha for trial.

Stanton Continues Battle.

Still Stanton kept up the fight and his lawyers announced that an appeal would be taken to the Illinois Supreme court. A sixty day stay, during which the appeal must be perfected, was granted, and all of this time Stanton remained in the county jail.

Stanton didn't relish the thought of tasting the kind of speedy justice meted out in the state of Wisconsin.

Zuta was dead. He could never tell who killed Lingle—if he knew—but still the forces of Rathbun and Roche pried into the mystery of this wily criminal, and with amazing results, as shall be revealed in the following chapter.

(The next installment of "The Solution of the Lingle Murder" will appear in tomorrow's Tribune.)

RUSSIA PUNISHES WOMAN BECAUSE YANKEE HIT HER

Lets Expert Off with Mild Reprimand.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, March 16.—[By Mail.]—Striking any one in Russia—like in most European countries, is a serious matter. One can beat his wife and children, one can shoot an interloper who breaks up your home, one can feel virtirol, and one can even plant a well directed kick in the seat of the pants, but one must not strike.

So things looked quite serious when one of a score of American college girls, experts on genetics, and brought here by the state swine trust to superintend the creation of a mammoth pig industry, was accused of striking his feminine interpreter on the jaw.

The incident occurred on a big hog farm in the Ukraine, where this isolated Yankee lived with plenty of pigs and lots of acres barrels of labor and a Russian woman, assigned to him to translate the language. She burst out of the little shack where she and her six year old child and the American expert lived, yelling bloody murder and accusing him of hitting her on the mouth and knocking her down.

Complains to Swine Trust.

Then hands scurried up and asked all about it and she insisted the big boned tattooed American in charge of the ranch had attacked her without provocation and inflicted grievous bodily injuries. The hired hands recalled dully that the irascible little interpretress bore no marks of a harsh smacking hand on her countenance and wondered what it was all about.

The woman tramped right down to the railroad station and there in the presence of a G. P. U. soldier wrote a complaint to the swine trust in Moscow against the alleged brutal treatment of the American.

An investigation was held immediately. All of the American experts were summoned to the capital for a conference on progress at their farms and mapping out the spring work. All shuddered at what might happen to the hasty American who had struck the translatress. They wondered whether it would mean a long period in exile in Siberia.

Admits Striking Woman.

The American frankly admitted he had lost his temper and hit the woman, but insisted he had not socked her hard, and denied knocking her down. He explained that he was suffering from influenza, had a fever, and had given the woman certain duties to perform, which she failed to execute, and when he remonstrated with her, she "smeared" him.

"That's when I smacked her, and I'm sorry for it," he said.

Officials of the swine trust were in a terrible stew. This Yankee was one of their best experts, had a fine record on his farm, had been fetched from the United States at big expense, and here was this woman gumming up everything by making charges and barking over a little slap.

"Why, if they had been lovers, she wouldn't have the right to make a peep about such a thing!" they argued in strict accordance with eastern philosophy.

So somebody put a little pressure on the translatress and she relented and said it had all been a mistake and that Mr. American had probably not figured on reaching her when he jabbed with his right. They buried the hatchet. But the woman was transferred to another post.

Secret of Scandal Leaks Out.

Efforts were made to keep the scandal a secret and journalists were hastily elbowed out of the room where the inquiry was held, but the facts leaked out. I am withholding the name of the young man in question because he is a nice lad and enjoys a favorable reputation with his friends and has signed a pledge never to hit any female again regardless of the provocation.

Another unfavorable incident was expected during the pig conference when C. L. Fortner of Octavia, Neb., decided to break his contract and chuck his job. When the soviet government fetched the Americans over they signed up for a year, and it was feared the swine trust might try to hold Fortner to his contract and perhaps even start legal proceedings against him.

But they didn't. They released him from the contract, merely stating gently but firmly that he would have to pay his own fare back home, and let it go at that.

Tells Why He Resigned.

Forntner said he got fed up because instead of giving him "adequate living quarters" promised when he was hired in New York, but not stipulated in the contract, the soviets had bunked him in a shack with five Russian "pig valets" on a farm that was so far from the nearest store that he had to apply for leave to go there, and when he did reach there found nothing for sale but whiskbrooms and blotters.

"I haven't any real kick," Fortner told me, "I just had enough, and anyway the whole job seemed so futile. It doesn't seem as if we will ever be able to teach these folks how to raise hogs according to the American plan, which is what they brought us over for."

Gus Augustine of Delta, Ia., another American pig expert, has no kick coming. He has a great big house like a mansion in a country club on his farm near Tiflis, where it's warm like Palm Beach all the time.

RUSSIA REFUSES JOBS TO UNSKILLED LABOR OF FOREIGN NATIONS

MOSCOW, April 12.—(AP)—Unskilled workers from America and other countries, who plan to come to Russia on tourist tickets in expectation of finding jobs, are likely to be disappointed in view of instructions issued by the government. Administrative departments, factories, and other five year plan projects, have been told not to give employment to such visitors.

Ordinary tourists visiting the soviet union on tickets of the tourist bureau will be welcomed, the statement said, and made as comfortable as conditions permit. However, unless they are engineers or skilled technicians, they must leave at the conclusion of the brief time allotted.

A number of Americans already have arrived in this country in search of jobs. Some are short of funds, but all have return tickets home, since this is required of tourists. Many sleep in hallways and bathrooms because of shortage of hotel accommodations. Engineers and skilled technicians brought here under government contract, however, are provided with rooms.

RUSSIA DEPORTS U. S. WOMAN FOR JOKE ON STALIN

Husband, an Engineer, Also Expelled.

BERLIN, April 12.—(AP)—Eve Gareets Grady, an American magazine writer, was expelled from soviet Russia because of a joke she told at the expense of Dictator Josef Stalin, she declared today on her arrival here from Moscow.

DICTATOR STALIN.

The article that aroused the government's anger was published in an American magazine and was entitled, "See Russia and Die Laughing." Her husband, William H. Grady, a consulting engineer of New York, also was expelled, with instructions to "keep your wife out of Russia." He was employed in the soviet union as an engineering expert.

The anecdote which Mrs. Grady says is "going the rounds" in Moscow related that a Jewish boy saved a stranger from drowning, whereupon the grateful stranger told him to ask anything he wished and it would be granted.

"I am powerful; I am Stalin," he was said to have remarked.

The boy, quite overcome, gasped and then said:

"If you are really Stalin, then don't tell any one it was I who saved you!"

Mrs. Grady expressed surprise that the foreign office so frankly specified the Stalin joke as the grounds for expulsion, instead of naming some broader reason for official irritation.

"We were in Kharkov when Moscow sent instructions to have us expelled," she said. "The foreign office spokesman told me the article as a whole was not offensive, but the anecdote concerning Stalin could not be permitted to pass without retaliation.

"We were asked to leave Russia as soon as possible. We were not treated rudely on the way, but, on the contrary, our exit was expedited with every courtesy."

Mr. Grady, who recently completed a survey of the Russian coal situation and designed a model American anthracite mine for the soviets, said no hard coal was used all winter in Russia, the entire output being hoarded for export. He declared the soviets expect to capture all of England's foreign markets for anthracite this year and also to compete successfully with American anthracite in American markets.

GNATS KILLING FARM ANIMALS BY THE HUNDRED

Clarksdale, Miss., April 12.—(AP)—Strong winds over the Mississippi delta tonight had pushed onward the swarms of buffalo gnats that have invaded this section for the last week.

In their wake they left hundreds of dead mules and cattle, and farming operations have been seriously hampered. Many farmers are without livestock to complete spring planting.

E. P. Krick, Monroe, La., Red Cross field representative, said outside assistance would be necessary in many cases where farmers have no money to replenish their stock.

Woman Screams, Turns Out Lights, So Bandits Flee

The quadruple action of Miss Kathleen Buckley, 227 South Lincoln street, a ticket agent, foiled four armed bandits when they tried to hold her up in the Lasin street station of the Metropolitan branch of the elevated last night. The command of the bandits to hand over the money started the action. Miss Buckley dropped to the cage floor, switched off the station lights, sounded the burglar alarm and screamed. The bandits fled.

2 Express Concern Over Fate of "Carrie."

and tact. I am delighted she is working as she is. Of course she excels—she always does. Hope it is kept up.

Refers to "Judge Monser."

"The 'hostess' appointment would be fine, and she would do that well. I [sic] think it is under Red Cross auspices. Go to Judge Monser. It ought not originate with me. It would be impolite for me to ask him. But I feel sure he can suggest the way—then let me know and I will help at Ohio headquarters or at national headquarters. I am pretty sure Monser could do it very quickly.

"Go to him, tell him she wants to do it, and you wish it, and the way will open. It will be fine and will help clear up the whole situation. I would rejoice over it myself, and Carrie would do it so well and find joy in the doing. Call on me for any help needed.

Advises Against Visit.

"Now, about Washington. I must not, cannot say it to Carrie, and I had rather she did not know I am saying it to you, because she could misconstrue it, but she and Isobelle ought not come to Washington now. Nor ought they go to New York. I had some inquiry made about things said, and the Washington trip last year led to suspicion about acting as informer [ridiculous, of course!] and the suspicion was confirmed by the long stay at the naval base at Port Jefferson. It is best now to avoid adding to these impressions.

"It is disgusting, but the necessity of the case looms big. More, I should not want Carrie and Isobelle to come here unless I could show them some attention. Any call I made, any call they made would be watched, and it would be not only unpleasant but add to the talk. Truly, seriously, I think it would be a tremendous mistake to come now. I am sure you will understand. I would delight to have them enjoy a visit. I could find pleasure in showing them attention, but I am thinking of their good.

Distressed, He Says.

"You asked, I am answering you frankly. It makes me very disgusted that we must consider these things, but my conviction [?] is very solemn. Really, this war problem has distressed me infinitely more than you can guess. I believe, I know Carrie is loyal and helpful. But prejudices and passions are not at my command. A difficult situation can't be defied, it has to be met with tact and prudence until the mists are cleared away. Glad your bond week turned out so well.

Sincerely, W. G. H.

"I think H. B. H. is fine for secretary. He has capacity and deserves encouragement."

FOUND BEATEN TO DEATH; BOY OF 20 IS HELD

Buffalo, N. Y., April 12.—(AP)—George Adams, formerly of Hudson, N. Y., was beaten to death in his room at the Niagara hotel today. Charles Greco, 20 years old, arrested an hour after the crime was discovered by detectives, is charged with murder, first degree.

When Greco was taken into custody the killing of Adams was not known to the police. A police car, answering a call for a reported holdup in the downtown section, picked him up as a suspect in the robbery case. William Wellington of Rochester had reported the holdup, charging that Greco, whom he knew, accosted him on the street and forced him to hand over all the money he had, sixty cents.

When Greco was arrested a check for $52, payable to George Adams and signed by an officer of the Portland Cement company, was found on the prisoner.

BORAH URGES CONGRESS RULE OF OIL INDUSTRY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 12.—[Special.]—Predicting higher gasoline prices as a result of the program of the Hoover administration to limit domestic oil production and importation, which he criticized as a scheme to assist the oil trust at the expense of automobile owners and other oil consumers, Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] proposed today that congress undertake a regulation of the oil industry as a public utility and thereby regulate the price of gasoline.

WM. E. BORAH. [Harris & Ewing Photo.]

"In my judgment," he said, "it is just as practicable, and quite as lawful, to treat the supplying of oil to the public as a public utility as it is the supplying of electric power."

The Idaho senator has not modified his opinion that the agreement of oil importers to curtail imports initiated by President Hoover and the restriction of domestic production sanctioned by the administration constitute violations of the Sherman act prohibiting agreements in restraint of trade.

Consumer Made to Pay.

But with the government condoning and fostering restraint of trade it behooves congress, Mr. Borah asserts, to come to the rescue of the consumer, who he says will be compelled to pay more for gasoline when the program announced by the administration last week goes into effect.

"If imports of oil are to be restricted upon the initiative and under the protection of the government and if domestic production is to be restricted upon the initiative and by authority of the states with the approval of the government, then the government and the states will certainly be constrained to protect the public in the price it must pay for oil and the products of oil," said the senator. "So far as the plans have been made public, there seems to be no purpose in any program yet presented to protect the users of oil and its products."

Cites Supreme Court View.

To establish that the supply of the public with oil and its products may be regarded as a public utility he cited the Supreme court decision that "property becomes clothed with a public interest when used in a manner to make it of public consequence and affect the community at large," and that such property "must submit to be controlled by the public for the common good."

"Oil," Senator Borah went on, "is indispensable to our national defense and to modern industrial life. We will certainly not consent to production being controlled without controlling the price the public must pay."

Plan delightful soup dinners this week . . . and every week

for extra tastiness and nourishment

There's something homey and cheerful about a meal with soup as the main dish. Everyone in the family enjoys it—from the newly weaned infant to the grandparents. Mother gets a "break" too, because soup dinners are easy to prepare . . . also there is only one kettle and fewer dishes to wash.

Soup dinners also are economical, and help out amazingly when the week's food allowance is running low. Serve a green vegetable with the soup and a pie or pudding dessert.

In planning your soup dinners you can choose from a large appetizing variety. For example: Clam Chowder, Potato Soup, Vegetable Chowder, Fish Chowder, Tomato, Cream of Asparagus, Cream of Onion, Oyster Soup. You'll find many good soup recipes in your cook book.

Be sure to pick a soup using plenty of milk, thus insuring a complete and balanced meal. Milk supplies Vitamins for growth and resistance; Proteins for building and repairing muscles and tissues; Minerals to build and protect sound teeth; Fat (and sugar too) for warmth and energy.

Milk keeps family health up and eating costs down. Use it daily to improve cereals, vegetables, gravies, puddings. 13 cents a quart.

Why not have the convenience of regular milk delivery to your home each day. Speak to your neighborhood Borden milkman, or phone Franklin 3107.

TOMATO SOUP

1 medium can tomatoes
½ onion
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon soda
1 qt. milk
½ cup flour
4 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon salt

Cook together tomato, onion, sugar for 15 minutes. Strain, then add soda. Make cream sauce by melting butter, then add flour. Stir until thoroughly mixed, add milk, one-third at a time, stirring to avoid lumps. Cook until the raw taste is gone. Just before serving and while hot, combine by pouring the tomato mixture into the cream sauce. Whipped cream or butter may be put on top.

CLAM CHOWDER

4 slices of bacon
1 onion, minced
1 can of minced clams
2 potatoes, cubed
2 tablespoons butter
1½ teaspoons of salt
⅛ teaspoon of pepper
1 quart of milk

Cut up bacon and fry but do not crisp. Remove bacon, fry onion in the fat. When a golden brown, add clams, then the cubed potatoes and a little water. Cook, and just before potatoes are tender, add milk and butter. Simmer slowly for at least half an hour. Longer cooking over slow heat enhances the flavor. Season with salt and pepper.

Borden's "Selected" Milk—specially produced for drinking

Extra precautions are taken at every step—in producing "Selected." It is produced on 105 picked farms . . . with healthy herds . . . modern facilities for stabling, milking the cows and cooling the milk. We pay the farmers a liberal premium for their extra care . . . It results in a milk the fine quality of which is manifest in its "Sweet Natural Taste." Yet the price you pay is only 3 cents more . . . 16 cents a quart. How children and other milk drinkers love "Selected" Milk and how they thrive on it. The small extra cost is repaid many, many times in dividends of better health that regular milk drinking brings. Why not give "Selected" a trial?

CAPITAL'S BEAUTY MIRACLE BLOOMS PINK ONCE MORE

Washington Cherry Trees Blossom.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 12.—[Special.]—Washington's famous Japanese cherry trees burst into full bloom today and 200,000 men, women and children, half of them out of town visitors, poured forth to feast their eyes upon the scene of beauty.

It was a dazzling, balmy day with the sun swimming in a firmament of unflecked blue—the sort of day that causes men to slough their overcoats and women to blossom forth in floating, shimmering things and hats of straw, the sort of day that warms you with a sense of blissful well being, the sort of a day that makes even misanthropes feel like cutting a caper.

The cherry trees, clothed in diaphanous clouds of pink, stood almost touching each other, poised on the shore of the Potomac park basin in which the gleaming shaft of the Washington monument was reflected like a silver lance. Almost encircling the great pool, a quarter of a mile in diameter, they spread their pink and white skirts like nymphs joining hands for a dance.

Throngs View Their Beauty.

In the very brink they stood, gowned, necklaced, ringed, bespangled, garlanded and festooned from crown to waist with pearls of pink petals, and there reaching far out like Narcissus, to embrace their images reposed in the rippling water.

Long before the church bells were ringing every avenue leading to the park was streaming with people. Nick Longworth and myriads of others who loved the cherry trees and cried to bring, had gone to their graves since their last blooming, even as you and I may before their next. And day was succeeding night and spring following winter as from eternity to eternity and other myriads were pressing forward to taste the exultance of life.

They came afoot and rolling on rubber in every sort of equipage from grand limousines, sporting footmen at coats of arms, to rattling flivvers and screaming motorcycles. License tags of about every state in the union were to be seen. A hundred policemen directed the traffic along a course of one way streets, blocked out for the occasion, leading around the basin and the Hains Point peninsula, which itself was ablaze with the blossoms of crocuses and hyacinths.

By noon the streets were solidly packed with cars, four and five abreast, moving at a snail's pace. By the latter part of the afternoon it took the rubber wheel pilgrims two hours to make the circuit of the basin, and it was after nightfall before the vehicle jam melted away and the streets were restored to two way traffic.

But where they came by the thousands on wheels they came by the tens of thousands afoot. There were fathers and mothers with youngsters reaching for the balloon man's red and yellow balloons. There were swains with sweethearts walking arm in arm on the basin parapet beneath the cherry blossoms with a look in their eyes that seemed to say they were hearing the pipes of Pan, though it may have been only the memory of last night's saxophone.

Vocabularies Bankrupted.

They sat on benches or on the grass drinking in the beauty of the pink necklaced basin with its background of urn shaped elms putting forth their bright green baby leaves. They bankrupted vocabularies in exclaiming to each other on the overwhelming entrancement of the sight of these cherry trees, looking like so many tiny volcanoes erupting pink popcorn.

Children romped over the spot where President John Quincy Adams was wont to undress before his morning plunge into the Potomac and where the first lady reporter interviewed him, sitting on his clothing with John immersed to his neck and compelled to give the interview he had been dodging before the lady would consent to go away. Near at hand, boys were warming up a baseball diamond, while on the public golf links grownups were limbering up winter dormant muscles.

While the people made merry in the age old festival of blossom time the lady to whom they were indebted for the cherry trees, Mrs. William Howard Taft, was sitting in her mansion on the hill. Tomorrow morning she will drive out to view the cherry trees, with her friend, the mikado of Japan, sent to her as a token of good will to America when she was in the White House twenty years ago.

HOOVERS ARE BACK IN WASHINGTON AFTER LONGWORTH RITES

Washington, April 12.—(AP)—President Hoover was back in the capital today from Cincinnati, where he attended the funeral of his personal friend and political ally, Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the house for the past six years.

The presidential special arrived at 7 o'clock and the chief executive and Mrs. Hoover detrained immediately and went to the White House for breakfast. The return trip was made leisurely with stops at a number of places long enough for Mr. and Mrs. Hoover to make back platform appearances.

Tuesday noon the President will address a meeting at the Pan-American union celebrating Pan-American day. Later in the day he will deliver an address as part of the 50th birthday celebration of Tuskegee institute. The speeches will be broadcast over a nation-wide hookup.

TRUCE IN CUBA DUE TO WORK OF AMERICAN ENVOY

Guggenheim Brings Peace to Warring Factions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 13.—[Special.]—The truce in Cuba between President Machado and his enemies who have been fomenting insurrection was brought about by the American ambassador, Harry F. Guggenheim, according to state department officials.

HARRY F. GUGGENHEIM.

Nobody professes to know, however, just how he did it—whether by exerting pressure upon the warring factions under the implied threat of American intervention under the terms of the Platt amendment or by conciliation oiled by the contents of the extensive champagne cellar he recently imported from France, or by both.

Acting in accord with the terms of the truce, President Machado released sixty political prisoners, including university students and Tomas G. Menocal, brother of former President Menocal, who is now leading the opposition to Machado. The understanding effected by Ambassador Guggenheim also provides for "amendment of any laws and acts that may be deemed by the people to have been erroneous," as Clemente Vasquez Bello announced it.

Pledged His Aid.

Calling at the palace, the American ambassador obtained President Machado's agreement to the truce, and afterward at the American embassy Menocal pledged him that he would do all in his power to restrain the bombings and other disturbances recently directed at the administration.

It is understood that Machado promised the ambassador to meet Menocal and resume discussion of the "Cuban national conciliation formula" which the former president has been pressing upon the government. Briefly, the proposal is that a nonpartisan cabinet be formed; that the constitution be amended; that President Machado consent to retire on May 20, 1932, instead of continuing in office for six years; that the three political parties be reorganized; that national elections be held in November of this year, and that the army guarantee fair elections.

On account of the collapse of the sugar market, Cuba has been in a sad economic plight for several years. But the unrest and recent disturbances have been fed by the widespread conviction that unconstitutional means were used by Machado in extending his term of office. He was elected in 1924 for a four year term, and he promised repeatedly to retire at the end of his term, in accordance with the platform of the Liberal party.

Promised Changes.

Nevertheless, in 1927 Machado induced the Cuban congress to propose constitutional amendments extending his term two more years. The congressmen were glad to accede to the president's wishes in this matter because the amendments also provided for an extension of their own terms.

That the 1928 amendments are illegal is the contention of the Nationalist party and a number of distinguished Cuban jurists, including former President Zayas and Dr. Mendez Capote, the chairman of the 1901 constitutional convention.

GUNMEN KILL THREE IN NEW YORK DAY; RACKET IS INVOLVED

New York, April 13.—(AP)—Fish market racketeers were blamed by police today for two killings, while a third slaying of a known gangster was ascribed to jealousy.

Three men invaded a converted houseboat on Gravesend bay, Brooklyn, shortly after midnight in a faked holdup staged for the purpose of slaying a man suspected of giving information of graft in the fish market.

Frank Zappo, 35, a guest of the houseboat, was slain. Salvadore Selli, one of the gunmen, was killed by a companion when the latter attempted to shoot Salva Morgione, who drew Selli in front of him as a shield. Morgione was wounded in the arm.

Mrs. Jennie Isolda was wounded when she attempted to block the escape of the gunmen.

Charles Bailey, 28, known to the police as a gangster, was shot six times and thrown from an automobile in the Bronx in sight of several persons. Police said they had learned the motive of the killing was jealousy.

Discovery of the mutilated pelvic section of a human body near a cemetery in Glendale, Queens, today intensified investigation into the mystery of a trail of human fragments which started from the Brooklyn end of the Williamsburg bridge March 27. Medical examiners were unable to decide whether the latest fragment was that of a man's or woman's body.

KING ALFONSO'S FOES TRIUMPH AS SPAIN VOTES

Monarchists Put to Rout by Republicans.

dalajara, Toledo, capital of imperial Spain and now the sombre fortress of the cardinal primate of Spain, and finally Seville, of which they say: "Who keeps Seville, keeps Spain; who loses Seville, loses Spain!"

Cadiz Backs Monarchists.

Cadiz, true to the memory of her swashbuckling son and hero, Primo de Rivera, elected a complete monarchist ticket, but elsewhere in the south it was a different story.

And in Madrid, where Alfonso's neighbors enjoy watching the palace guards change every day, even the palace ward returned a republican majority of two to one. In the gray region below where respectability and squalor live side by side, the monarchist candidates polled only a few score of votes. In the grand Buena Vista quarter 9,900 votes were cast for the imprisoned revolt conspirators and 6,300 for the crown.

A Calm Election.

The streets of the capital had been sprinkled with sand for possible cavalry charges. Mounted civil guards patroled the city, fingering their rifles, but throughout the nation Spain expressed its apparent disavowal of her king amidst complete calm. When police charged into the few mobs that gathered they used the flats of their sabers and none was hurt.

Woman Robbed of $12,000 Jewels in Her Penthouse

New York, April 12.—(AP)—Robbery of jewels valued at $12,000 from a Park avenue penthouse has been reported to police. Mrs. Samuel Yaffe said that while she was entertaining at cards Wednesday night, robbers stole the gems from her bedroom. Her penthouse is atop a 19 story building.

POLICE SHAKEUP GIVES NEW YORK NEW VICE SQUAD

New York, April 12.—[Special.]—The nature of the drastic shakeup of this city's vice squad became even more sweeping tonight when Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney announced that with the approval of Mayor James J. Walker all officers below the rank of captain will be transferred as part of the move to create a virtually new vice squad. Eighteen lieutenants and about ten sergeants will release the posts they have held with the vice squad for new men.

The commissioner's original announcement on Saturday of a shakeup in the squad explained that about 300 plain clothes men would be ordered back to uniform duty, but it was learned today that the number of men now to be transferred, including the sergeants and lieutenants, may be nearer 400.

Arrangements for an early start in the investigation of the government of New York City will be made tomorrow at a conference between Senator Samuel Hofstadter, chairman of the joint legislative committee, and Samuel Seabury, its counsel.

Praised by Sister Superior

The good sisters at St. Joseph's Orphanage, Nashua, N. H., know how to keep the children under their charge healthy and strong. Here is a letter from the Sister Superior:

"We keep Father John's Medicine on hand at all times and give it to the children with excellent results. When they are pale, weak and undernourished, it helps to make them strong and healthy. Children who dislike plain cod liver oil, take it in Father John's Medicine easily; it fact, they find it pleasant to take and easy to digest."

Father John's Medicine is rich in health-giving vitamins; used in 184 hospitals and institutions.

LET WORK BEGIN!

There are definite signs that business is better.

For one thing, building is on the up. Building programs—announced or contemplated—reveal shrewd foresight at work. The advantage of today's readjusted building costs cannot longer be ignored.

Southern Oak Flooring Industries has undertaken to broadcast this message of cheer and optimism. Response has been instantaneous. The sunshine of work renewed, is sweeping away the mental clouds of depression.

Cheerful and alert, the craftsman illustrated above, who speaks for Southern Oak Flooring Industries, now tells you he's on the job. There are two reasons for his activity: One is, the position of commanding preference enjoyed by Oak wherever Hardwood Floors are used; the other is—

Mass production by the manufacturers of SOFI Oak Flooring has placed this world's supreme Oak Flooring within reach of every user, at prices which are actual bargains.

SOFI Oak Floors are a splendid possession within the reach of the most modest budget. For example:

A living room 12 by 15 feet (4 yards wide and 5 yards long) can be laid in SOFI Oak and finished in your choice of beautiful colors, for no more than the cost of a good 9 by 12 foot domestic rug.

In schools, offices, public buildings, dormitories, etc., the initial cost and amazingly low maintenance of SOFI Oak Floors are above competition. In plants and factories, the same is true, plus the advantage of a resilient, non-conductive material on which the standing worker produces more efficiently.

This is the time to act. Southern Oak Flooring Industries is equipped and ready to help. It will furnish you, promptly and without charge, dependable architectural counsel and advice, information and literature on any question pertaining to domestic or commercial uses of Hardwood Floors. Just address your inquiry to Industries Research, 916 Boyle Building, Little Rock, Arkansas—Heart of America's Hardwoods.

[The products of Southern Oak Flooring Industries are conveniently available through your local lumber dealer in every grade, size and design adapted to modern usage. Look for the Trade Mark on the bundles.]

POLICE REFORM.

The first and most urgent problem of the new mayor is the reform of the police department. This is a task far more difficult than the public realizes. There are certain factors of a solution which are obvious enough to any one. We all know, for example, that reform must begin at the top. That is, the mayor must be determined to correct conditions and he must choose an agent who is loyal to that purpose and who has the force of character and the ability to take efficient measures and to press unflinchingly for their accomplishment.

What few citizens realize is the resistance such an effort will meet. This resistance will come both from without and within the department. Organized lawbreaking has never in the past been so profitable as it is today, and with profit comes power. Organized lawbreaking is closely allied to corrupt politics and it has built up and wields today a widespread influence. The moment the effort to throw off its tentacles begins it will bring all of its force to bear. At the same time the members of the force who have been a part of this alliance will evade and resist. The new chief will find his efforts blocked and avoided. The mayor himself will be subjected to pressure. Orders and measures must be carried out by subordinates and many of these subordinates will resist and evade them as long and as far as they dare. Thus the whole effort will be retarded and entangled in a net of evasion and resistance. It cannot succeed by any one sweeping act of authority. Present police conditions run deep into the social and political constitution of the community and can only be corrected by a long and persistent struggle.

The will of a conscientious mayor and of a conscientious chief of police must therefore be fortified by a determined will of the people, an understanding will which will not expect impossible results, but will demand substantial evidence of progress. What the city and its decent citizenship chiefly need and demand is protection from crimes of violence, and this must be the first and chief objective of a reformed police system. Effort to accomplish this should not be dissipated and weakened by attempts to discipline all the peccadillos of which a huge community of diverse moral standards and social habits may be guilty. The problem of violent crime, the activities of the gangster and the racketeer, call for the concentrated effort of our government.

LABORATORY DOGS.

A bill has been introduced in the state legislature to forbid the use of dogs in scientific experimentation. Two years ago a bill was presented to forbid the use of any living animal in the laboratory. After hearings in which leading medical men made an overwhelming case against that bill it was withdrawn. This time the anti-vivisectionists have limited their proposed restriction to dogs, thinking, no doubt, that the almost universal affection for dogs will give this bill a better chance of enactment than its predecessor.

Legislators will be asked to believe that everybody's pet dog is in danger of being taken to a laboratory and subjected to cruelties. The fact, of course, is that animals used in the laboratories are unreclaimed strays obtained at the dog pound, where such animals are invariably put to death. In the laboratory kennels they are treated with a degree of kindness which to most of them must be a novelty. When they are operated upon they are completely anesthetized. They die as painlessly as they would have died in the pound.

Dr. A. C. Ivy, professor of physiology at Northwestern university, has stated that "the discovery of insulin, which will benefit the lives of one million people living in the United States today, was made solely by experiments on dogs. Death from parathyroid tetany no longer occurs because of experiments performed on dogs. Pernicious anaemia can now be controlled as a result of experiments on dogs. The discovery of ethylene anesthesia was made possible in great part through the study of dogs. . . . Dogs are used extensively in testing drugs before they are given to man because dogs react so much like the human being. . . . If dogs were useless, why would eminent scientists use them? If their use for experimental purposes were unnecessary, they would use a smaller animal that is less expensive to keep."

Only an incorrigible sentimentality could sponsor such a bill. It need scarcely be said that vastly more suffering is caused every day to animals used for food than is caused in all the laboratories of the United States in ten years. If man is justified in slaughtering millions of sheep, swine, and cattle every year so that he may eat their flesh, how can it be maintained that he is not justified in killing a few thousand homeless dogs with far less suffering to the individual animal in order that human and animal life may be prolonged and made happier?

There are laws on the books today which forbid cruelty to animals. Not once since those laws were enacted has an experimental biologist in Illinois been found guilty of violating them, although the laboratories are open to inspection at all times.

It should be added that if experimentation on dogs is forbidden in Illinois the training of our doctors will be seriously hampered. Our great medical schools will deteriorate and our ablar scientists and more promising students will go elsewhere. Inevitably the fact will be reflected in the public health in Illinois. Without reducing the sufferings of a few stray dogs, we shall have increased needlessly the suffering of human beings. That is what the anti-vivisectionists regard as a humanitarian achievement.

CONSERVATISM AND THE COLLEGES.

Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, in projecting a plan for the instruction of young voters in Republican party doctrine, remarks that the task is doubly difficult because youth is not conservative and, moreover, in our country is subject to the influence of teachers in the schools and colleges who are given to radical theorizing. Mr. Lucas says that "it is a matter of common information and deep concern that many of our universities are literally saturated with radicalism."

We think there is less definite information upon this subject than he asserts or assumes, but it is probably true that in the writing and the teaching of our college professors the conservative case in politics and in social action does not often find itself in friendly hands. The reason seems to us obvious. The professor is usually one who has passed from the seat of the pupil to the desk of the instructor with no intervening experience of practical affairs. He is able to indulge himself in theorizing without the correction of practical experiment. Such competition as he must meet is from minds similarly conditioned, the minds of inexperienced youth, the minds of other theorists. If he is free from the pressure of immediate self-interest, being secure in his livelihood and subject to little competition, he is also free from the restraints which responsibility in action imposes upon individuals whose test is results. He is therefore even more the victim of wishful thinking than the man who is constantly under the correction of practical experience in the harsh school of our intense competition. This is not true of the student and teacher of the natural sciences. A chemist or physicist must accept results. However desirable it may seem to be in a particular case that two and two should make five, the mathematician is quickly corrected if he assumes they do. The social or political scientist, so called, can always indulge in the pleasures of hope. He can always build an ideal structure in the likeness of what seems good to him without expense or the danger that it will crash down upon his own head. He does not have to meet a pay roll next Monday. He can build his bridge to Utopia without much understanding of strains or the resistance of unfriendly realities.

This heavily discounts the advantage the theorist may derive from the relative independence and disinterestedness of his position, and it greatly reduces the practical value of his theories.

But we think occasion for concern because of the tendency to radicalism among teachers is less than the conservative imagines. The radicalism of youth passes with maturity and experience in most cases, and with it the influence of its teachers. And nothing is more certain than that criticism and attack are essential not only to progress but to the health of any institution or system. Conservative régimes commit suicide. They die from within. Their strength is in their respect for realities, and it is when they want criticism that they forget or shut eyes to conditions which are compelling change.

These truisms are not urged against Mr. Lucas' project. Education in Republican doctrine and historic accomplishment is very greatly needed. They are inadequately supplied in our schools and colleges, and if Mr. Lucas' plan presents them competently and with not too much partisan bias and exaggeration, even opposition and criticism will be bettered by it and public thought enlightened and invigorated. There is a special timeliness also in the proposal, for we are passing through a period in which harsh conditions invite to hasty experiment, to plausible innovations. Institutions, principles, policies, customs are all under fire. Criticism will not destroy them, but they should have the benefit of intelligent defense.

GETTING THE NEW LICENSE PLATE.

Automobile owners have been indulged in over three months of grace in getting new license plates, state and city. The majority of owners did not take advantage of the indulgence, but thousands, apparently did. The police now are ordered to bring the delinquents to time. Some states are exacting. The car has a new plate Jan. 1 or it cannot be used. The owner is arrested if he takes it out before he has renewed his license. Because of tight times thousands of cars were under cover in New York at the beginning of the year. The owners postponed paying the license fees, but they put their cars up until they bought their new plates.

A short period of grace does not seem unreasonable here, but to allow the year to go past its first quarter before a renewal of license is required is a laxness which makes the law appear negligible. It was understood that no checkup would be made until the primary and election were out of the way, but that explanation does not put a better face on the matter. Thirty days' time is abundant grace. More than that is an imposition on the licensing system.

Editorial of the Day

A "PIPE DREAM" COME TRUE.

[Philadelphia Public Ledger.]

In three more months it will be possible for a turn of a valve in the Amarillo, Tex., gas field to govern the blue flames beneath frying pans in Chicago. By July 1 the last link in the pipe line from Texas to Chicago will be completed, nearly 1,600 miles of welded conduit feeding natural gas from the hills of the southwest to the metropolis of the great lakes region. Contracts signed only last week assure it.

This will be the first gas pipe line with such a range. But others are even now being laid from the Louisiana fields northward through the middle west, from the Kansas fields eastward; plans are being formulated for lines from northern Pennsylvania to New York, Pittsburgh, Boston.

It is but a short time since the vision of underground conduits threading mountains and valleys for hundreds and thousands of miles was regarded as just another "pipe dream." Now that "pipe dream" is coming true and great industries are watching with shrewd eyes. After gas and oil, then what? Milk? Small size coal? Fruit juice? Even mail and express, in long range pneumatic tubes?

NEW METHOD FOR DIPHTHERIA CONTROL.

FOR those who want to have their children vaccinated against diphtheria but who are restrained from doing so by one force or another, there is a new way to beat the devil around the stump. Dr. Lowenstein, one of the best scientists in Germany, has invented a salve which serves the purpose. This salve contains diphtheria toxoid and some killed diphtheria bacilli mixed with a good ointment base or grease. This ointment is thoroughly rubbed into the skin of the back over the rib region. These rubbings are given at ten day intervals. Three rubs constitute a vaccination. The skin is first washed with soap and water, thoroughly dried, washed with alcohol and ether, dried, and then the ointment is rubbed in.

Drs. Kegel and Gasul tried the ointment on forty-seven children. They first gave them a Schick test to establish their susceptibility to diphtheria. Not enough work has been done to prove what proportion of a great mass of children could be protected by this method, nor how long the protection will last. Enough has been done to establish that the method has merit and is worth trying by all those who cannot or will not use the injection method.

In the first place, it seems to be entirely safe and it causes no unpleasant symptoms. It does not make the child sensitive to protein. The presence of the dead bacteria in the salve is supposed to make it somewhat protective against bacteria as well as against bacterial toxin. If a person feels that he cannot protect his child without being inconsistent with his public utterances or affiliations, this method offers him what the politicians call a "chance for an out." All of these points are in favor of the method. On the other side is the fact that the injection method makes immune a larger proportion of those on whom it is used. As a protection against diphtheria it is the safer method.

CHANCES ARE GOOD.

Mrs. A. M. C. writes: I am 25 years old and in the first stages of tuberculosis. Is there any cure? I am drinking a quart of milk and 2 raw eggs daily.

REPLY.

Your chance of being cured should be good. You had better go to a sanitarium and stay in bed until they advise you to get out. Rest is more important than diet in the cure. You also need fresh air, preferably clean air, right living, and medical and nursing care.

CURING A BUNION.

W. O. writes: Let me give you my cure for bunions. It is so simple you would hardly believe it. Merely rubbing good turpentine on it night and morning, with an occasional dab of iodine cured mine. The turpentine must be rubbed on it religiously and iodine dabbed on about once every couple of weeks. It takes a long time to cure it—a year—but it certainly is worth it.

REPLY.

I wonder if you did not wear a different type of shoe and otherwise indirectly treat your bunion during that year.

I can see how your remedy might help the corn and other changed soft tissues, but I cannot see how it would put the bones back in place. Probably, too, your bunion may not have been much of a twister.

DIET FOR MOTHER.

Anxious Expectant Mother writes:

1. What must an expectant mother eat to form teeth and bones for the coming baby?

2. Will you tell me how to count for the coming of my baby?

REPLY.

1. To supply the necessary lime and phosphorus she should drink milk and eat cereals. For the necessary vitamins she should eat fruit and vegetables for C; wheat germ, whole grains, and egg for B complex; and fish fat for D.

2. Count back nine months and add seven days. This gives the day and month. Setting the year is easy. The actual time elapsed is 273 days. The time used in calculation is 280 from the day used as a basis of calculation.

EXCESS DUE TO WASTE.

Chicago, March 30.—[Friend of the People.]—We have a three story building with a store downstairs and the whole building has been empty except one flat for a year. There is no one in the flat during the day. Why should we get a water bill of $11.20 for six weeks and if not paid in the time limit it amounts to over $13 for an empty building? Why is the meter read every six weeks? The meter must be wrong.

Please be advised that our meter and plumbing examiner called at this premise on March 21, and reported the registration of the meter as 30,200 cubic feet, which verifies the previous registration of 28,000 cubic feet on Feb. 26. He also reports that he found two water closets leaking and that the tenant in the second rear flat has allowed the water to run during cold weather to prevent freezing. The leaks that exist and the waste of water referred to are undoubtedly the cause of the excessive water bills. Would suggest that a licensed plumbor repair all leaks and abate all waste, thereby conserving the water supply and restoring the consumption and bills to normal.

JOSEPH P. GUBBINS,
Superintendent of Water.

DEPENDS ON POLICY.

Chicago, March 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—For twenty years I have paid on a $500 life insurance policy in a fraternal order but during the last year was unable to keep up my dues and payments and was suspended. Am I able to get any of this money back which I have paid, and will the policy I am holding ever be of any value?

F. D.

Your rights depend on the wording of your certificate and on the wording of the by-laws of the order. Some insurance builds up a cash surrender value and some is not so worded.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LIMITATION PERIOD TEN YEARS.

Chicago, March 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—After a period of eleven years can the wives of two brothers (deceased) be responsible for "going on" another brother's bond, who is executor of their father's estate and has lost same?

M. S. F.

You do not state who went on the bond. The limitation period on written contracts is ten years from the date when the cause of action accrued.

THE TIME HAS COME—to think about many things that we hadn't dared to think about before. Vacation days, for instance. Prosperity is to a certain extent still hiding around the corner, but we see one eye and one foot sticking out and we know he's there, the little rascal, and we'll have him very soon. See you. Thinking about vacations is as much fun as having them, or more. It's highly improbable that we can go this summer to South Africa or Sumatra or the Ganges, but there's no law against thinking about them. The travel agents say we can go abroad much cheaper than we can stay at home. The travel agents have no idea how cheaply we can stay at home, but it's a nice thought, and taking that view of the situation we can decide on going up the Rhine and to Munich and all over the Black Forest and to fine old German towns with frowning medieval walls and moats and things. And then we can tire of travel in Germany and pick Spain and go all over the place and see the king and a bull fight and call it a day, and jump over into Italy. After Naples and Rome and Bologna—ah, dear old Bologna—then to France and the Château country and Chartres and Paris. Then Belgium and Bruges, and after that Holland. Then across the channel and wander down English lanes and across flower starred fields and into the cool, dark shadows of age old cathedrals. And London. Ah, what a great vacation trip. After that, if we spend our vacation in the south end of Lincoln park, or even in the north end, or at Jackson park, what matter? Vacation after all is a state of mind. Boloney.

BOUNDARY CALL.

When radiant spring walks softly down our glen
In rose and silver mists of dawning, when Shy April proffers violets again
Will you return?

When the low music of the summer's loom
Hums in the emptiness that was your room
To walk beneath our orchard's rain of bloom
Will you return?

If you could leave God's gardens for one day
And idle here with me in the old way
I think I might find faith again to pray.
Will you return?

ETHELYN BRYANT CHAPMAN.

IT'S SO DULL after the mayoralty election here in Chicago that the newspapers are making whoopee over a story about a cow belonging to Arcangelo Bartolomucci of Rome, Italy, giving birth to a two-headed calf. Oh, we saw one of those things in the first circus we ever went to—quite some time ago. And, anyhow, Mussolini will put Arcangelo in jail if his two-headed calf gets more publicity even for a day than the Duce himself.

"THREE COURSES for trans-Atlantic airplane flights," said Dr. Kimball, the meteorologist, at a dinner in his honor in New York, "have been proven." Doctor, we have devoted many anxious years trying to teach students of colleges of journalism to write it "proved," and not "proven," and here you come along and upset the beans and we've got to start all over again.

IT MAY HAVE BEEN A WELSH RABBIT.

R. H. L.: Yes, there are ghosts. You seem to be open-minded on the subject and I want you to know my experience. I was walking past an old graveyard after supper last summer at night when I sat down near an old gravestone and must have fallen into a light sleep. I awoke suddenly to see what I thought was a rabbit scurrying across the road. Impelled by some strange influence, I cannot say what, I followed the rabbit. As I approached, the rabbit seemed to grow larger and change into a gray mist. I could see the moonlight on the gravestones behind it. It took human form and beckoned me to approach it, but fear took possession of me and I ran away. What possible explanation is there to this except that what I had supposed to be a rabbit was a ghost? M. X. M.

THE VERDICT in Berlin on Gen. Pershing from a study of his book is that he was a gifted organizer, but lacked heart and character. And also, as we would say in America, the general possesses what might be euphoniously called "intestinal fortitude," although we don't always say it just that way.

ADMONITION FROM BILDAD THE SHUHITE.

O foolish feeble poets
(Which same, I know, am I)
Don't keep forbidding people
To mourn you when you die;

Nobody mourns a poet,
And didn't you know that?
'Tis bones of last year's warblers
Will make the harvest fat;

And though you've hawked your songs in vain
Since ever you were born,
Be patient yet a little;
They'll all come out—in corn.

ACCORDING to the figures just compiled there are 336,272 Americans permanently residing in foreign lands. And whenever we go out riding in the family bus and a speed demon whizzes by at sixty or seventy miles an hour and scares us out of two years' growth we wish there were more Americans living abroad.

AND NOW the Portuguese are running around uttering wild cries and threatening to stage a revolution. It seems the only way nowadays to attract American tourists. Well, the country that gets 'em will be the one that puts on battles matinée and evening and serves free cocktails for breakfast.

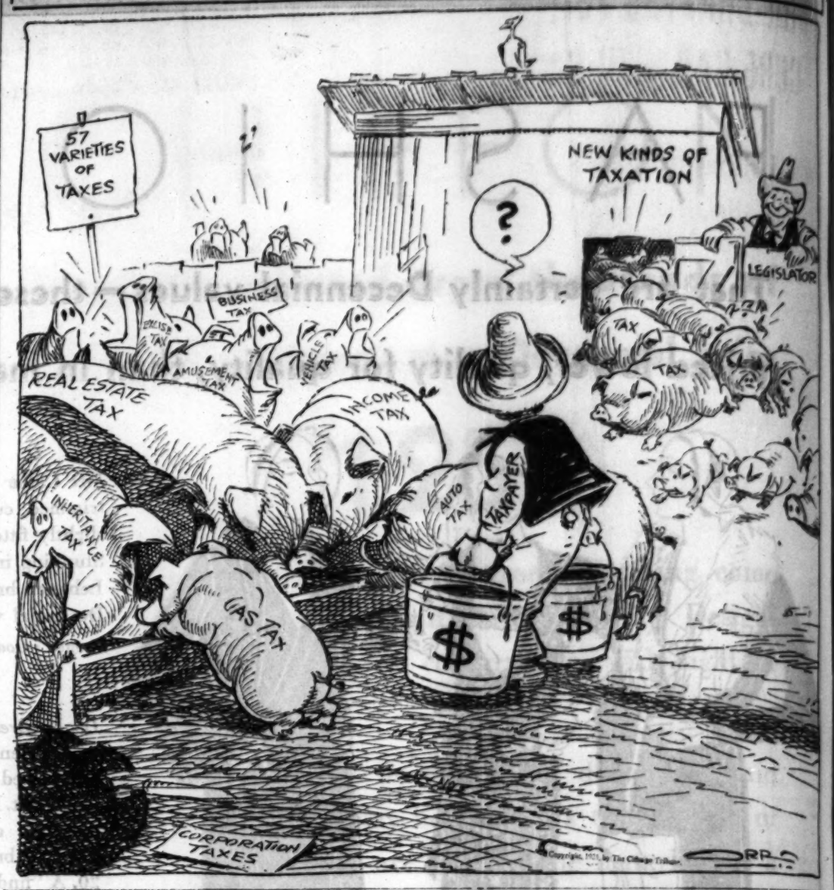
THE ENDLESS TASK



FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 13, 1915.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Further restrictions of an extraordinary nature have been imposed by Great Britain upon American commerce. In a note transmitted to the state department by its ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British government announces that it will contest the validity of the transfer of German and Austrian merchant vessels to American ownership since the beginning of the war; that it will seize and contest the validity of transfer of American owned merchant vessels from foreign registry to the American flag if such vessels appear to be trading with its enemies either directly or indirectly; and that the skippers of American owned vessels transferred from foreign to American registry are advised to carry a United States certificate attesting the validity of the transfer, although this shall not protect the vessel from seizure and prize court proceedings if evidence of trading with the enemies of Great Britain is disclosed.

LONDON.—With the capture by the Russians of almost all the main chain of mountains, the battle of the Carpathians which has lasted upward of eighty days, is apparently reaching a termination over one extensive front. The Russians are said to be moving down the southern slopes toward the plain of Hungary.

CHICAGO. — Aldace F. Walker, chairman of the board of directors of the Santa Fe system, died of heart disease at his home in New York City at the age of 59. He had planned to sail for Europe tomorrow. For a number of years he was a resident of Chicago and a member of the Chicago club. He was one of the most eminent and best known railroad officials in the country, and an authority on railroad law.

HAVANA.—At a private session the Cuban constitutional convention, by a vote of 13 to 10, adopted a motion expressing the opinion that the convention is opposed to the Platt amendment on account of the terms in which some of its clauses are drawn. It objects to the intervention and the naval coaling stations clauses. It is considered that the action was largely due to the animosity of some of the delegates against Gen. Wood.

NEW YORK.—Protestant clergymen of various denominations held a conference on the best methods of putting an end to gambling and kindred evils among the wealthy people of their congregations. The cause of the conference was the discovery that much of the big Easter collections was made by society women gambling and putting part of their winnings on the collection plates. A number of instances were related where society women had fleeced college boys.

CHICAGO.—Miss Genovieve Ward, acting in the rôle of Stephanie in "Forget Me Not" at Haverly's, should be seen by all who can appreciate fine dramatic work. Gen. John Haverly is in the city and declared he will have a new theater for next season, "and it will be the finest place of amusement ever built in the west." He said the site has not been decided upon.

DUBLIN.—Charles Stewart Parnell spoke at the land league conference here. He declared that the Gladstone land bill has many illusory provisions, particularly those relating to free sale, and that tenants now in arrears will not be benefited by the measure. Other home rule members present agreed with Mr. Parnell. A land league convention has been called for April 21 to consider the bill.

CHICAGO.—David McGee, one more of the pioneers of Chicago, died at his residence near Aurora at the ripe age of four score years. With the solitary exception of Gurdon S. Hubbard, he was the oldest living settler of early Chicago.

CHICAGO.—Mark Beaubien, another of Chicago's early settlers, died at his home at Kankakee. He came to Chicago in 1826 and voted in the Chicago precinct of the county of Peoria in 1830. He built a log house, in which he kept a hotel called Sauganash, after an Indian chief, and it was there that John Wentworth in 1836 took his first meal in Chicago. Mr. Beaubien was the father of 23 children.

RAISING THE COMPULSORY SCHOOL AGE.

Chicago, April 7.—There is now in committee at Springfield a proposed law that, according to the prevailing opinion of the Howland club [Chicago public school principals], in a recent meeting, is decidedly vicious. Briefly, it seeks to raise the age at which a child may go to work to eighteen years with some lesser provisions for graduation from an eighth grade school. The present age is sixteen and until 1929 it was fourteen.

The conception of this law seems to have originated with other than the people now facing the operation of the law at sixteen years. The proponents of the law seem to assume that all children can profit by staying in the school as it is now operated.

Every principal knows the fallacy of that assumption. No one feels more bitterly than the principal the unadaptability of the traditional school to the needs of the overgrown slow minded child, especially when he has come to the age of physical development.

People who would not demand that a child with a club foot compete in athletics with the two footed child seem foolishly to try to force the club minded child to compete with the normal pupil. He can't do it, and his failure is not his fault. It is unkind—worse, diseducative—to force him into a position he cannot maintain without losing his self-respect. The children, if not the teachers, tell him he is a bonehead and in time he, too, comes to believe it. If he has the courage left to run away from an intolerable situation we send a truant officer to drag him back. His developing inferiority complex is thus grooved the deeper. An inferior child generally makes a poor workman but a superior criminal.

But if the present school does not meet the situation, why not change the school? The educators have been seeking to do this for years. Supt. Bogan's administration has set itself to establish such schools. The educator knows that mere inability to get history and arithmetic is no measure of civic usefulness. He knows that the community is operated by people who have less than a sixth grade education. He would, if he could, give to each child what that child's ability needs for its development. He dreams of the machinery with which to train every child under every condition.

But the school that must be used to train the slow minded is costly. It must provide machinery designed to a trade angle. In spite of the fact that Chicago has already made an enviable record in the establishment of special schools, a conservative estimate made by Principal Boyer of the cost necessary to caring for all our children to eighteen is twenty-five million dollars for buildings and two and a half million annually for operation.

Will the taxpayer stand it? Probably not.

And what happens now, even with the sixteen year limit? Many good boys get discouraged, lose their self-respect, grow to believe they are by nature failures, drift with the great, dirty flotsam that is background and source of our costly criminality. Such boys need to get a job—or we need to furnish them schools equipped to their type of talent. Until the community is ready to pay the cost of special schools, a law like that now pending is vicious.

Principal of Robert Fulton School.

EVANSTON HAS AN ORCHESTRA, TOO.

Evanston, Ill., April 2.—Mr. Percy Grainger's praise of the accomplishments of the Grand Rapids orchestra and Mr. Rudolph Reuter's praise of the work of a similar organization in Indianapolis, both of which are referred to in your today's editorial, "Music in the Midlands," make me wish greatly that both of these most capable men of music might find it possible to hear the Evanston Symphony orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. George Dasch.

ALEX W. MOSELEY.

AND SO HAVE THE TRI-CITIES.

Davenport, Ia., April 9.—Your editorial "Music in the Midlands" touches on an important and underemphasized phase of the cultural development of our middle west.

However, Grand Rapids and Indianapolis are not the only cities in Chicagoland having permanent, paid symphony orchestras. Out here on the banks of the Mississippi, in the Tri-Cities [Moline, Rock Island, and Davenport], a sixty piece orchestra, under the direction of Ludwig Becker, former concertmeister of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, has given a regular series of concerts for the last twelve years. During the present season such well known artists as Halle Stiles of the Chicago Opera company, Mischa Mischakoff of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Levitzki and Walter Mills have appeared as soloists with the orchestra.

The orchestra association sponsors a young artist contest in which piano and voice teachers in eastern Iowa and western Illinois enter pupils. A secondary orchestra of sixty pieces provides training for young musicians who have graduated from the school orchestras and from which the chairs of the symphony orchestra are filled as vacancies occur.

The Tri-City Symphony orchestra is regarded as the foremost cultural asset of this community.

MR. BROOKHART IN PANAMA.

Mount Morris, Ill., April 5.—It certainly is hard to please you cheap sports, fanatical wets. If Senator Brookhart and Representative Denison had attended the wet banquet in Panama you would have scolded them for being hypocrites and for violating their principles. Since as honored guests they refused to attend unless liquor was absent you have to pillory them as killjoys. It shows that the wets are more intolerant than the drys.

THE BARKING DOG AMENDED.

Chicago, March 31.—I am greatly interested in the replies to my letter, captioned "A Barking Dog." My inquiry in no way referred to "a barking dog" but to a growling, snapping dog which, in my opinion, represents a vast difference. The growling, snapping dog is to be feared. No so the barking dog, which is in a class one need give little or no concern.

DOWN TO THE SUBWAY.

Chicago, April 1.—The subway model on exhibition in the Palmer house is perfect. It shows you exactly how the completed structure will look. For instance, it is 31 feet from the street level down to the platform where you step into the train. Easy stairway steps are 6 inches high. That makes 62 steps going down, and 62 coming back. Better get in training.

SWANSON BACKS BILL DRAFTED TO CURE BAIL EVILS

Would Regulate Bondsmen, He Declares.

Favorable action on the legislation now pending in Springfield which would eliminate bail bond abuses was urged yesterday by State's Attorney John A. Swanson in a letter to Marshall Keig, president of the Commonwealth club. The club is sponsoring the bills, which were introduced by State Senator Arthur A. Huebsch of Brookfield.

After outlining the deplorable situation now existing in respect to bail bonds, Mr. Swanson declared that passage of the proposed legislation would strike a powerful blow at criminals and their allies, the professional bondsmen.

Cites Defects in System.

"In spite of everything that may be done in an administrative way to make bail bonds really effective," the letter stated, "our present system of bail has certain weaknesses and defects which can only be cured by remedial legislation.

"The bills introduced in the state senate, if enacted into law, will accomplish their purpose of curing present bail bond abuses. These bills do not affect the respectable citizen who has committed some petty violation of the law, but strike at the professional criminal and his ally, the professional bondsman.

"If these bills are adopted, dangerous criminals who commit crimes will be available for trial, as no one will care to bail criminals when they know the full penalty of the bond will be exacted from them in the event the bond is forfeited.

Can Regulate Bondsmen.

Mr. Swanson's letter points out that under the provisions of the bill for licensing and regulating professional bondsmen the courts will be able to deal effectively with bondsmen who attempt to "fix" cases or who charge extortionate fees for making bonds by providing fines and by providing for the revocation and suspension of the license of the bondsmen who engage in such practices.

"When a professional bondsman incurs a bond forfeiture and fails to pay up in full promptly he will soon be out of business," the letter said. "The provision of the bills making the forfeiture of bail in felony cases a felony, will be a strong deterrent to such practices and the chancery proceeding provided for collecting forfeited bonds will materially reduce the burden of taxation."

Has Stomach Trouble; Sues His Landlady for $5,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 12.—Juan Torres, a city clerk, has brought a claim for damages for $5,000 against the landlady of the boarding house in which he was a lodger. The claim, supported by medical certificates, attributes a long and costly stomach trouble to the bad food and cooking of the boarding house.

LISBON PLUGS UP ISLAND PORTS TO CRUSH REBELLION

Masses Expeditionary Force Near Madeira.

LISBON, Portugal, April 12.—(AP)—Lisbon was quiet today as the government gave its undivided attention to suppressing the rebellions at Funchal, Madeira, and on the islands of Terceira and San Miguel in the Azores.

An expeditionary force is slowly gathering at Porto Santo island, 40 miles from Madeira. This soon will be augmented by the cruiser Vasco da Gama, which sailed with additional troops from Lisbon today. President Carmona visited the ship before her departure and was given full military honors aboard, being cheered loudly by officers and men.

Three fishing trawlers have been requisitioned and heavily armed before being added to the fleet. Meanwhile efforts are being made to enforce rigorously the government's blockade of the island.

Halt Cargo Bound for Isle.

The British steamer Avoceta today unloaded a cargo destined for Madeira at Lisbon. In like manner the steamers Weser and Elizabethville disembarked in the Portuguese capital passengers who intended going to Funchal. By this means the government hopes to bring about the collapse of the rebellion without using force.

The government issued a decree today removing Dr. Bernardino Machado, former president of the republic, from the University of Coimbra, where he was a professor, along with other educators in other schools both here

The gunboat Ibo arrived today at Porto Santo and was placed at the disposal of the naval and military forces. The Carvalho Arico sailed tonight for Horta, where the garrison is loyal to the center government.

An official statement tonight said "quiet is absolute" in all of the oversea colonies. The capital itself is almost back to normal, for the police and soldier guards which had been stationed in the streets have been withdrawn and the people are packing the theaters and cafés.

Rebels Seize Lisbon Chiefs.

PONTA DELGADA, San Miguel Island, April 21.—(AP)—Capt. Caldas Barros, governor of Terceira island; Dr. Luis Bettencourt, president of the district council, and Dr. José Bruno Carreiro, a high official in the administration, are prisoners in the hands of the rebel junta, which has taken possession of Terceira island.

Transport Sails for Azores.

PORTO SANTO, Madeira Islands April 12.—(AP)—The Portuguese transport Pedro Gomes sailed with troops from here this morning for Horta, in the Azores island group.

U. S. TO ASK BIDS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF FIVE CHRISTIE WAR TANKS

Washington, D. C., April 13.—[Special.]—Bids for the construction of five new Christie 10 ton combat tanks will be asked by the war department within the next few days, it was learned today.

Up to the present time the Christie tank, built under contract for the war department by the United States Wheel and Track Laying corporation of Rahway, N. J., has not been formally turned over to the war department.

It is considered probable that the contract for the new tanks will go to Walter Christie, the inventor, although under the law other manufacturers are permitted to submit bids.

Indications are that the specifications will call for a tank with a speed of at least 40 miles on hard roads and from 20 to 30 miles across country.

TWO KILLED BY CRASH OF PLANE AT MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., April 12.—(AP)—George Wein, chief pilot for the Curtiss-Wright airport here, and his mechanic, Carl Jantz, were killed late today when their plane crashed at the airport, northwest of the city. Hundreds of persons at the field said a control wire snapped, sending the plane into a dive from 300 feet.

Wing Buckles; Two Die.

Houston, Tex., April 12.—(AP)—Gertin A. Munson, 30, the pilot, and W. H. Portman, 24, were killed late today in the crash of their airplane near Houston. The right wing of the craft buckled when a left bank was attempted.

Two Passengers Killed.

Sodus, N. Y., April 12.—(AP)—Hugh Shipley, Putneyville farmer, and Homer Potwine, a garage employé, riding with Robert Loope, were killed in the crash of an airplane here today. Loope was uninjured, but was so unnerved he was unable tonight to give a coherent version of the crash. The plane crashed from an altitude of about 300 feet.

Former Bank Teller Killed.

Marion, Ill., April 12.—[Special.]—Walter Frick, Marion, was fatally injured today in the crash of an airplane he was piloting from Marion airport. Frick was formerly a teller in the defunct First National bank of Marion.

Injured When Plane Crashes.

Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., April 12.—(AP)—William Davis, 47, of Ridgewood, N. J., suffered a fractured skull and a shattered right leg today as his monoplane crashed from 500 feet in sight of more than 4,000 spectators.

BOYS FIND 'PEN'; ONE NEAR DEATH FROM ITS BULLET

William La Valley, 6 years old, and his brother, Freddie, aged 5, were playing in the alley in the rear of their home at 562 Oakwood boulevard on Saturday. They found a fountain pen. They hurried to show their treasure to their mother, Mrs. Margaret La Valley, who put it away for them on a shelf.

Yesterday morning, while the mother was sleeping, Freddie and William, still clad in their nightgowns, found the fountain pen while playing around the house. There was a funny little spring on it. Freddie released it. There was a sharp report and William fell over, blood spurting from his side. Freddie ran crying to his mother, who called the police. William was taken to the county hospital, where doctors said the bullet had barely missed the boy's heart, struck a rib and ricocheted against his spine, where it lodged.

Doctors said the lad probably would live, but would be paralyzed.

The fountain pen pistol contained a .32 caliber bullet. Police said apparently some robber had thrown the weapon away while being pursued.

VATICAN OPENS GENERAL STORE FOR 700 CITIZENS

Groceries, Meat, Dry Goods Sold at Cost.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, April 12.—To the other sovereign appurtenances of the independent state of Vatican City has now been added a general store handling a full line of groceries, fresh vegetables, fresh meats and fish, boots and shoes, drygoods, and hardware.

As in soviet Russia, this store, which is called the Vatican commissary, is a state monopoly and will supply the wants of the 700 odd citizens of Vatican City. They must possess cards in order to make purchases and none but Vatican City inhabitants are permitted to buy.

The store was thrown open for business just after Easter. It is a sumptuous store both in name and in structure. It is called the commissary palace, or Palazzo Del Annona, and was specially built as a gracery store near the Porta Angelica, between the Via Pellegrini and the Via Piazzo Pius X.

Suplies Come from Rome.

The store carries out Pope Pius' desires to make his little realm completely self-sustaining in all respects, dependent in no ostensible fashion at least, on the neighboring state of Italy.

Supplies come from Roman wholesale houses and are sold at cost. The Vatican food administration does not desire to make any profits out of the business and by special provision of the Lateran treaty there are no customs barriers between the Vatican City and Italy.

Everything, except fresh meat and fish sales, is handled directly by the state in the Vatican commissary. Meat and fish, however, are brought into Vatican City each morning by Roman merchants and only the part actually purchased is paid for by the Vatican. Unsold portions are returned to the merchants.

On the upper floor of the grocery palace are display rooms for drygoods and less perishable articles and in the central area are booths for the sale of vegetables and comestibles. Ovens, a refrigerator and store rooms have been installed on the ground floor.

Meat and Fish Below.

Meat and fish, it is explained, are kept on the lower floor in order to avoid the spread of bad odors, with only small samples on display under glass in the main display room of the commissary.

The store has been expressly located at the Porta Angelica, one of the subsidiary entrances to Vatican City, so that this material aspect of the city of religion will not offend the pope's visitors who enter by the gate at the Bell Arch, known as the noble entrance.

GUN GANG HOLDS UP FIVE.

Four gunmen entered a soft drink parlor at 9652 Avenue N Saturday and lined up four patrons and the owner, Joseph E. Drolac, against a wall, and took $120 from the till.

WAR VETERANS FIGHT TO OUST PRUSSIAN DIET

Voters Go to Polls to Decide on Referendum.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 12.—The Steel Helmet organization of former German warriors, having arrayed themselves alongside the Nationalists and Fascisti on the political battlefield, are engaged in a preliminary skirmish to smash the Socialist party in Germany and its stronghold, the Prussian diet.

As a result of the efforts of the Steel Helmet organization, which corresponds to the American Legion, public voting is proceeding in Prussia on a preliminary referendum in which the voters are expressing their wish as to whether or not a general referendum shall be called on the dissolution of the diet as demanded by the government's enemies. The diet under normal circumstances would not expire until the spring of next year. The voting began last Wednesday and will continue until April 21.

Expect Preliminary Victory.

To be successful the Steel Helmets must rally one-tenth of the electorate to their support at this preliminary plebiscite. As over one-third of the Prussian electors supported the parties which are now backing the referendum demand, there is little doubt as to the success of this first trial of strength in the voting booths.

Believing that "whoever holds Prussia holds Germany," the Steel Helmets have been campaigning vigorously in order to influence the voters to demand a general referendum. With their success in this skirmish practically assured, the war veterans face a critical test.

A referendum must then be held in which the only question before the voters is whether or not they desire the dissolution of the diet. If the Steel Helmets are to win this final battle they must bring more than half the electorate to the polls, and a majority of these must support their demand.

Face Huge Task.

According to political observers, this is a huge task, for recent local elections have demonstrated that the right radicals have not continued to grow in strength at the same rate as during the first months after their spectacular success in the general elections last September.

The bitterness of the preliminary campaign was indicated yesterday when the government suppressed the Stahlhelm, the mouthpiece of the Steel Helmets, for three months because of attacks on the Prussian government. The prohibition was enforced under the emergency dictatorship decree ordered by President Paul von Hindenburg to curb political crimes. President Hindenburg is honorary president of the Steel Helmet group.

VETERANS' AID SWELLS BUDGET, WOOD DECLARES

Washington, D. C., April 12.—[Special.]—Chairman Will R. Wood [Rep., Ind.] of the house appropriations committee today charged that the appropriations voted last winter for veterans' relief had helped to swell the prospective budget for the current fiscal year. He added also that new veterans' relief legislation already proposed for enactment at the next congress would further increase the treasury deficit for next year.

CHAIRMAN WILL R. WOOD.

Chairman Wood estimated that enactment of the new Legion program would boost the total needed for veterans' relief in 1932 to above one billion dollars. He added that the total list of expenditures for all veterans' relief for the current fiscal year would amount to approximately 957 millions.

Referring to figures he requested from Gen. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, Chairman Wood said:

"From Gen. Hines' reply it is disclosed that at least $84,330,000 in supplemental appropriations was required for world war veterans' relief for the year 1931 and was a part of the national deficit. Add to this the fact that in the closing days of the last congress an additional 112 million dollars was made available to take care of loans on veterans' adjusted service certificates."

MOVE 600 PATIENTS TO NEW MANTENO INSANE HOSPITAL

Six hundred patients from the Elgin and Kankakee state hospitals have been transferred to the new state hospital for the insane at Manteno, Kankakee county, 50 miles southwest of Chicago, the state department of public welfare announced yesterday.

The new hospital, situated on a 1,000 acre site acquired in 1928, consists of eight cottages each capable of accommodating 100 patients and other buildings for the physicians and other employés. When entirely completed, the hospital will represent an investment of $1,750,000.

TWO U. S. AGENTS HELD ON CHARGE OF EXTORTION

Charged with having extorted money from a restaurant owner by threats to have him prosecuted for failure to return proper income tax information, two agents of the department of internal revenue were under arrest at the Fillmore street police station last night and will be questioned at the federal building today by their superiors.

The agents are Frank Sorrentino, 25 years old, 827 South Racine avenue, and Sidney Rieger, 28 years old, 4219 North Francisco avenue.

Alfred Brizzolaro, one of the owners of the B. & B. restaurant at 4358 West Harrison street, told the police that he had paid the pair $350 when they told him he would be taken before the federal court on income tax charges. He had them arrested when they went to his place again Saturday and, according to his story, demanded $700 more.

ROBBED BY HIS PASSENGERS.

After driving three men from Elston and Milwaukee avenues to the south part of Milwaukee, Leonard Barton, 2755 West Jackson boulevard, a taxicab driver, was held up by his passengers and robbed of $5. He returned to Chicago and reported the robbery to the police.

M. T., 922 LUDINGTON, ESCANABA, MICH.—"About two years ago I decided I would sell my property in Escanaba and tried an ad in the Chicago Tribune, as I could not find a buyer with ready cash in my community. I was astonished at the quick results I got from that little ad. Two days later I had 12 inquiries regarding sale and terms, and finally completed a deal satisfactory to both of us. Now I cannot give enough praise to the Tribune want ads, for they surely mean 'quick service.'"

HENRY F. MUELLER, 4318 N. WESTERN AVE., CHICAGO.—"I now use Tribune Sunday and daily want and business advertisements exclusively. I advertised a grocery store located at 2916 Belmont avenue, cor. Richmond, and sold it to Mr. H. Hoffman for $3,500.00—a Sunday ad. I received 7 calls, and only four calls from four other Chicago papers, including a German paper. I have such experiences continually through Tribune want ads."

ALFRED KOCHER, OCONOMOWOC, WIS.—"I became a firm believer in the value of the Chicago Tribune want ads last summer when I secured a slightly used Boyd-Martin, single step racing boat and an Elto Super Quad motor for my son, at a price that I still consider to be a bargain for the motor alone. Incidentally, the motor was the item we advertised for but the Barbour Boat company made such a tempting offer that I purchased both for less than the price of one. Exactly four days elapsed from the time that the ad was inserted until the time that the boat was placed in the water, and two of these days were consumed in shipping. In competition with much more expensive boats, my son won two second prizes and a first, so we were well pleased with our purchase through the Tribune."

S. R. STRADLING, 8 N. CEDAR ST., STURGEON BAY, WIS.—"I had been in the billiard and bowling business in this town for fifteen years working from 8 o'clock in the morning until midnight, including Sundays and holidays. Although I had always made good I desired to make a change so as to have a little time at home. Noticing your ads of beauty culture schools I decided to go to Chicago. I took a course at Burnham's School of Beauty Culture about two years ago. Have a shop in this town now, doing fine, and can spend my evenings and Sundays with my family."

ALLAN T. FINNELL, 100 N. LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO.—"Shortly after Jan. 1st of this year, I was instructed by a non-resident client immediately to sell for cash and for the best price obtainable, a $2,500 real estate mortgage on Chicago property. The mortgage, although a first and well secured, was payable in small monthly installments and was not considered readily merchantable on the then prevailing market by my associates or by brokers and others to whom I offered it for sale. So on Sunday, Jan. 25th, I inserted in the Tribune, under the proper classification, a short ad describing the mortgage, terms, etc. The very next day I received among other inquiries a telephone call which resulted a few days thereafter in the sale of the mortgage on exactly the terms I had offered it. For the information of the judges of this contest I herewith attach documentary evidence of the truthfulness of this statement, which includes a copy of the ad and also an escrow agreement showing the actual sale. My experience thoroughly proved to me the very great value and selling power of Tribune want ads."

In your admiration of LaSalle beauty and your delight in LaSalle performance, do not overlook the fact that LaSalle is an economical car to own. This economy is of the fundamental sort which always attends quality. The same fine design and precise craftsmanship that give both Cadillac and LaSalle their spirited, smooth and silent performance, assure low operating and maintenance cost. Even LaSalle beauty is a sound investment because it remains in approved good taste season after season. Yet LaSalle prices are but little higher than those of many cars that lack its distinguished character.

HOOVER'S UNCLE, WITH WHOM HE ONCE LIVED, DIES

Served as Agent Among Indians.

Pawhuska, Okla., April 12.—(AP)—Maj. Laban J. Miles, 87, uncle of President Hoover, with whom the President lived as a boy after the death of his father, died here at his home this afternoon. He was one of Oklahoma's most colorful figures and had served as agent for the Osage Indian reservation by appointment of President Hayes.

When President Hoover's father died at West Branch, Iowa, the 14 year old future President came to Pawhuska to live with his uncle, who was a brother of the President's mother.

The trip from West Branch to Pawhuska was considered a long one in those days, the President's uncle recalled later. Young Hoover was accompanied by the major. At Coffeyville, Kas., the railroad could take them no farther, and the remainder of the journey was by buckboard and horseback.

Stays There for Year.

President Hoover stayed with his uncle and Mrs. Miles for a year. During the winter he attended the school established here for government officials on the Osage reservation. Then Mrs. Hoover took young Herbert back into her home at West Branch.

The old house still stands where the present President spent his year in Oklahoma, in the Osage "capital."

During Mr. Hoover's student days at Leland Stanford, Major Miles visited him there. When the President was touring the country during his 1928 campaign Major Miles went to West Branch and accompanied the President on his special train as far as Kansas City.

President Hoover invited his uncle to attend his inauguration, but feebleness from old age prevented. Mrs. Miles—the President's "aunt Agnes"—died about four years ago.

Maj. Miles, a native of Ohio, had been a figure in Indian affairs in Oklahoma for more than half a century. He came to the Osage reservation in 1878 as Indian agent but subsequently was removed during the Cleveland administration.

In 1889 Maj. Miles was reappointed superintendent of the Osage agency and held office again until July 4, 1893, when he and forty other agents in various parts of the country were removed and replaced by military appointees.

Speaking the Osage language, Maj. Miles spent 51 years in promoting their welfare.

Funeral services for Maj. Miles will be held here Tuesday morning and burial will be at Arkansas City, Kas. He is survived by two sons, Theodore and Oakley, and two daughters, Mrs. Blanche Hopper of Pawhuska and Harriet Odell of Topeka, Kas.

THREE ANTARCTIC WHALE HUNTERS DIE IN BLIZZARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, April 12.—The story of the death of three whale hunters and a battle for their lives by other members of the crew in an Antarctic blizzard was revealed here today when the whaling ship Seville docked.

One of the whale boats attached to the Seville was caught in a blizzard and was forced to seek shelter in an Antarctic icepack. The crew of the Seville found the whaler icebound, and the captain radioed for help.

The rescue ship was unable to get within five miles of Bouvet island. The crew of the ice-locked whale boat abandoned ship and set out to walk over the ice. They arrived at the relief ship at midnight, March 31, in a state of exhaustion. Several of the whaler's crew, they said, had fallen through the ice into the sea. Three were killed.

Dr. Mosko, Talmudist and Orientalist, Dies at 62

BUDAPEST, April 12.—(AP)—The Rev. Dr. Michael K. Mosko, famous orientalist and talmudist, died here today. He was 62.

as it removes Bacterial-Mouth

WHEN your smile reveals teeth stained to an ugly yellow, cloudy, marred by decay and denuded at their necks by receding gums others know that you have Bacterial-Mouth. An inexcusable condition caused by germs that sweep into the mouth with every breath and attack teeth and gums. Kolynos whitens teeth so quickly and firms gums so effectively because it kills the germs that are the source of this trouble.

Use the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique for 3 days—a half-inch of Kolynos on a dry brush, morning and night. Then look at your teeth—fully 3 shades whiter.

In 10 days the improvement will be so marked you will never again say that white teeth are a gift received only by a fortunate few.

Dentists advocate the Dry-Brush Technique as the one way to use a dentifrice full strength and keep brush bristles stiff enough to clean every tooth surface and massage gums properly. Kolynos permits this technique.

This highly concentrated, double-strength dental cream is unique in action. It multiplies 25 times when it enters the mouth—thus a half-inch of Kolynos is equal in effectiveness to 12 inches of the ordinary toothpaste. It becomes a surging, antiseptic FOAM that makes wetting the toothbrush unnecessary. You can feel Kolynos work. It foams into every pit, fissure and crevice.

Germs that cause Bacterial-Mouth and lead to stain, decay and gum diseases are killed. They vanish and the entire mouth is purified. Kolynos kills 190 million germs in 15 seconds, 424 million in 60 seconds.

This amazing Kolynos FOAM removes food particles that ferment and cause decay . . . neutralizes acids . . . washes away tartar and the unsightly mucoid coating that clouds teeth.

Easily and quickly, it cleans and polishes teeth down to the naked, white enamel—without injury. And for 3 hours after each brushing this cleansing, purifying process continues.

So long as you use the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique teeth will remain gleaming white and sound, gums will be firm and healthy.

Look for Results in 3 Days

If you want whiter, sounder teeth and firm, pink gums start using Kolynos—a half-inch on a dry brush, morning and night. Within 3 days teeth will look whiter—fully 3 shades. Gums will look and feel better. Your mouth will tingle with a clean, sweet taste. Try a tube of Kolynos.

COLLEGE CAMPUS AT MOUNT MORRIS SWEPT BY BLAZE

Mount Morris, Ill., April 12.—[Special.]—Two buildings of Mount Morris college were burned to the ground here today and two others were greatly damaged by fire which for a time threatened to wipe out the business district of the town of 3,000 population. Only one college building escaped damage. Loss was estimated to exceed $250,000.

The college is one of the oldest in the middle west. It was founded in 1839 by the Methodists and was purchased forty years later by the Church of the Brethren, sometimes called the Dunkards.

Fire departments from seven towns fought the three hour blaze of undetermined origin, which was discovered shortly after 9 a. m. in the gymnasium. Fanned by a strong west wind, the flames jumped to two nearby buildings, the girls' dormitory, a three story building, and "Old Sandstone," oldest structure on the campus, housing the library and classrooms.

The gymnasium and dormitory were destroyed and the roofs of the library and the administration building were burned away.

The 202 students in the college were away for the spring vacation. Volunteer firemen were recruited in Mount Morris and fire equipment was sent from Rockford, Oregon, Polo, Freeport, Dixon, and Byron.

TRY FOUR TODAY FOR 2 DEATHS IN ARSON PLOT

Accused of an arson plot in which two children were burned to death, four men are scheduled to go on trial today before Judge Joseph Sabath on charges of murder. The state has indicated it will ask the death penalty for the alleged conspirators.

The four defendants are Harry Goldvarg, proprietor of a butcher shop at 3755 North Kedzie avenue, in whose shop the fire was started, and Jack Rosow, Jacob Tatelman, and Martin Borad. A fifth man, Louis Footlick, who was indicted with the others as the alleged go-between in the plot, was granted a separate trial.

The fire, started in the butcher shop, spread to an adjoining flat, in which Jerome and Homer Israelson, small sons of Mrs. Dora Israelson, were burned to death. Their mother was severely injured in attempting to save her children, but she recovered.

The state charges that Rosow and Tatelman set fire to the shop after Footlick had arranged with Goldvarg for a plot to collect the fire insurance. Borad acted as their chauffeur.

"Men of Art" Links Paintings to Daily Living

Tells Struggles, Triumphs of Sculptors, Too.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"MEN OF ART," by Thomas Craven [Simon & Schuster], is an interesting literary experiment. You remember a few years ago that Will Durant wrote a book called "The Story of Philosophy" [who DOESN'T remember it].

Before the publication of that book the general reading public had an idea that philosophy was something that one studied, not something that one applied or used in one's daily life. Mr. Durant gave his readers philosophy in the most human form possible, through short biographies of the great philosophers. When they had finished the book the readers knew enough about all of the Galahad's of philosophy to explain their reputations. Those who read also had learned, without any conscious effort, a good deal about philosophy.

Thomas Craven has chosen the same method in "Men of Art." The fact that the Book of the Month club distributed it as the April choice to that club's membership and that the outsize volume, five hundred pages, with full page illustrations has been priced at only $3 by the publishers, will mean a wide distribution of the book. Finally, it, which has been looked upon as an esoteric interest, the plaything of the very wealthy, and an interest spurred from literature rather than used to it, has been brought to the reading public in a popular volume.

Mr. Craven makes no concessions to popularity in his method of tracing the history of western art from Giotto to modernism—that is, he has not come down to any possible portion of the audience, he has not confined himself to words of one syllable, he has not attempted to do a primer of art. But he has succeeded in adapting a popular and proved method of presentation.

The author does not confine himself to short biographies of the great artists. He sketches the times which produced them as artists as well as the background which bore them as human beings. And as he progresses with his history, he frankly and without moralism adds his own criticism and comment to that which history has told about them.

Mr. Craven is a fearless critic and a good writer. If one does not agree with him, as many will not, for instance, in his dislike of modernism, at least he wins for himself the respect that an honest judgment always earns.

It is not as a history of art, however, that most of his public will judge "Men of Art." Most readers will read it as literature, not as criticism, not as literature it has a definite appeal.

"The whole book," he says in his foreword, "is a tribute to the power and the glory of artists whose work is impregnated with human meanings and interwoven with the fabric of the social structure, as opposed to the futile practitioners of art for art's sake. Accordingly I have been at pains to reconstruct backgrounds, to present the artist in relation to contemporary events, and events in relation to the special civilizations producing them."

It is as a panorama of such backgrounds, such civilizations, that "Men of Art" appeals to the reader not ordinarily interested in art. No civilization is without its art, however primitive, however decadent, however sublime. A history of art is in a sense a history of mankind.

Mr. Craven chooses, as he says, only to mention peaks in the geography of art. He omits some which the world has accepted as peaks, because to him their height has been slightly exaggerated and because, even in a book of five hundred large pages, he cannot go exhaustively into the subject, even in the mention of names. He has made no attempt to be exhaustive in any of his chapters. They are studies of the lives of the painters and the movements which they represented. Further reading and study will complete the pictures for readers. These are skillfully done outlines, rather like an authentic, articulated skeleton to the student of anatomy. From such a skeleton the author carefully reconstructs enough of the anatomy to give the reader a definite sense of form as well as structure. And to Mr. Craven is a living thing, a valuable and important part of life, only by understanding that part can the understanding of other problems of human existence in relation to the whole be sufficiently clear.

A Good Study of Childhood; Some Classroom Blunders.

Two interesting books are seeing the light today. Both are published by the Viking press. "Trott and His Sister," by André Lichtenberger, has had an enormous success in Europe. It appears now in an English translation with an introduction by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. She commends with enthusiasm this charming study of childhood not written at all for children, but for adults.

"More Boners" is a second volume of those terribly funny mistakes that many have been compiled from themes and examination papers. It is tragically labeled "A Second Golden Treasury of Misinformation."

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

Now is the time for all Chicagoans to behold a talker that features their own home town. Gazing upon "Three Girls Lost in Chicago," they will see familiar sights, hear familiar sounds, and recognize telephone numbers. Fun, rather!

This is an interesting little drama and a well acted one. The trio playing the leading rôles have been well cast and give intelligent characterizations. Loretta Young as Noreen is a smart, wholesome girl; Joyce Compton portrays a shy and none too bright Edna; Joan Marsh, who looks quite a bit like Jean Harlow, is an unscrupulous, gold digging Marcia, who, you feel, was born wise in the ways of separating a man from his money and good sense.

The girls are strangers when they meet at an airport junction. During the flight to Chicago Noreen and Edna become acquainted. Upon landing, Marcia wishes herself upon them. The three repair to Mrs. McGee's boarding house, which serves as a center for their adventures.

John Wayne performs with delightful sincerity the rôle of an ambitious young architect, who also lives at Mrs. McGee's. He falls for Marcia, who uses him—and pretty nearly finishes him. Gangster front page stuff! But sweet Noreen is there, and, well—what do you think?

Lew Cody qualifies as a sugar daddy and a hard boiled egg. The work of Bert Roach and others will give you pleasure.

"Three Girls Lost in Chicago" has been ably directed and should make an hour pass pleasantly for any one. The story was written by Robert D. Andrews, Chicago newspaper man.

See you tomorrow.

Prayers in Churches, Atheist Cries Lessen, While Russia Works

[Copyright, 1931, By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, April 12.—[Special.]—For a brief hour or two last night a visitor here might have believed that the clock of the revolution had been put back as believers thronged the churches unmolested for the Easter midnight mass of the orthodox church here, but the bells that had been the glory of pre-revolution Moscow were silent—not on a night to Rome, according to the ancient legend, but broken up and melted to serve the five year plan of bolshevist materialism.

Only a scant few of the score of Moscow churches—once numbered at forty times forty—were open for worship, though some that have been converted to workers' clubs were ablaze with lights and music.

Religion is dying in Moscow and the churches left were enough for the small but faithful remnant, mostly old and saddened people.

The soviet press and the Godless magazine complain of slackened interest in the atheist campaign. It is true, but that is of no benefit to the church which has now grown too feeble for the Kremlin's artillery. The public attention is being directed this year so far as Easter is concerned to the need for work in the factories and fields, not to anti-religious demonstrations.

Greeks of Orthodox Faith Celebrate Their Easter

CARDINAL MUNDELEIN LEAVES FOR ROME; TO DEDICATE COLLEGE

Bound for Italy and the dedicatory exercises of the new College of the Propaganda in Rome, Cardinal Mundelein left Chicago yesterday on the Broadway Limited of the Pennsylvania Lines. He will sail tomorrow (Tuesday) from New York on the Aquitania for Cherbourg, landing there April 21, and will be gone six weeks in all. All his time will be spent in the Eternal City.

Because of his share in the financing of the rebuilding of the institution, which is more than three centuries old and the center for the training of Catholic missionaries of all nations and to all lands, it is expected that the Chicago prelate will have a signal part in the ceremonies. The date set for the services is April 24.

"We have not been advised," Cardinal Mundelein said yesterday, "what has been planned in Rome or what the program will be. We're going over to find out." And he smiled at the group of clergy and laiety waiting to wish him bon voyage.

Three years ago the American cardinal delighted Pope Pius by his trip to the Vatican to present the pontiff with a check for $1,500,000, a loan raised by a bond issue guaranteed by himself, which made possible an immediate start on a project close to the heart of the pope. That was the removal of the College of the Propaganda to a less congested part of the city and the erection of a new and modern building.

This structure, now ready for occupancy, is one of the largest and most modern edifices in Vatican City, and forms one angle of St. Peter's square. The historic home of the pontiffs, the Vatican, completes the opposite angle.

Cardinal Mundelein was accompanied on his journey by two aids, the Rev. Robert Maguire, chancellor, and the Rev. George Casey, assistant chancellor of the archdiocese. In the group at the station to see him off were the Rt. Rev. Bernard J. Shell, auxiliary bishop; Dr. L. D. Moorhead, dean of the medical school of Loyola university, and others.

Civil War Veteran, 100 Yrs. Old Today, Gets Public Honors

The western suburbs turned out yesterday to honor Frederick William Seymour of Maywood, oldest civil war veteran in Illinois. He will be 100 years old tomorrow. A parade of veterans, members of American Legion posts from all sections of the county, featured the day.

Congratulatory telegrams were sent to Mr. Seymour by President Hoover, Mayor Cermak, Senators James Hamilton Lewis and Otis Glenn of Illinois, Gov. Emmerson, Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, and James Reed, former senator from Missouri. The President's message also congratulated Maywood post 133 of the Legion on the dedication of its new memorial. The dedication was part of the day's celebration.

Speeches were made by Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom and Magistrate George F. Lee. Mr. Seymour presented to Harry F. Karr, post commander, an American flag which he planted on the steps of the Atlanta, Ga., city hall during Sherman's march to the sea. Mr. Seymour lives at 614 South 8th avenue, Maywood, and is a former police magistrate.

More Than 86,000 Attend European Circus at Stadium

More than 86,000 men, women and children witnessed the Great European Olympia circus at the Chicago Stadium in the four performances given Saturday and yesterday. This is believed to be the largest attendance at any four consecutive circus performances in America.

On Saturday afternoon and night, 45,000 spectators passed through the turnstiles. A share of the receipts of these shows was given to the Senn High school band fund. Large blocks of seats have been allotted for the two shows today to employés of the Western Electric works at Hawthorne.

According to Sidney N. Strotz and Barnes and Carruthers, directors of the Olympia's American tour, the success of the local engagement thus far has encouraged them to add considerably to the fall itinerary of the show. The local engagement ends next Monday night.

Chicago Hears Music from Its Composers

Mrs. Freer's Opera Sung; Other Features.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Few musical events could have been more nearly all-Chicago than that at the Blackstone theater yesterday afternoon. Not only the participants but the composers were all Chicagoans, and the program covered the range of orchestral composition, solo numbers, and opera.

The first number, though sung in concert form, was the opera, "Massimilliano, the Court Jester," by Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer, a composer with a host of works to her credit and an honorable record as a battler for the cause of the English language in song and opera. This work tells of a tragic incident in ancient Venice. Like the rest of Mrs. Freer's compositions, it showed a pronounced taste for good melody intelligently written, and so constructed that the text was plainly projected.

It was sung by William Miller in the name part, also Eva Gordon Horadesky, Edith Mansfield, Leslie Arnold, and Rudolf Haas, with Willard Rhodes as narrator. The Woman's Symphony orchestra played, and Leroy Wetzel conducted. At the end of the performance there was prolonged applause, for the sake of the composer as well as the participants, though Mrs. Freer seemed amply content to allow the participants to have it all.

Following the opera, Ebba Sundstrom took the baton of the orchestra and conducted a program of concert works by Hamilton Forrest, Theodora Troendle, Dr. J. Lewis Browne, and Helen Sears. Audrey Call, violinist, and Agnes Hope Pillsbury were the soloists.

The Chicago Chamber Music series, highly popular this season, closed yesterday afternoon with a concert by the Mischakoff String quartet. This organization, composed of leading members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, has been in existence only this season, but it has shown a phenomenal growth in artistic ability. Its development was especially evident yesterday in "The Pixy-Ring," by H. Waldo Warner, a sprightly, perky suite of miniature numbers, played lightly, humorously, and with a marvel of accuracy. Beethoven's quartet in A, opus 18, No. 5, and Smetana's in E minor were also on the program.

Theodora Troendle's name as composer on two programs yesterday, that at the Blackstone, just mentioned, and the one at the Playhouse, where she personally appeared as pianist. Her works heard here displayed a fluent use of the modern idiom, an idiom, however, used for musical expression and not at all for studious display. Both as compositions and as performances they were interesting and entertaining to an uncommon degree.

Associated with her on the program was Luella Canterbury, reader, who to the piano accompaniment of Sidney Silber appeared in Richard Strauss' musical arrangement of Tennyson's "Enoch Arden," a work that has not been presented frequently since the time years ago when the late Max Heinrich used to recite it.

Of other events of the afternoon, Leila Bederkhan, at the Civic theater, presented practically the same program of dances of the orient that she had done a few weeks before at Orchestra hall; Wilhelmina Alexander, a young pianist, gave a recital at Kimball hall; and David Vardi and Eva Youlit gave a dramatic recital at the Studebaker.

Industrial Museum Opens May 1, 1932; to Show Coal Mine

May 1, 1932, a year before the start of the World's Fair, was designated yesterday by Attorney Leo F. Wormser, one of the trustees, as the date for the public opening of the Museum of Science and Industry in the reconstructed Fine Arts building in Jackson park.

Returning from a trip through the east in search of a permanent director for the museum, Mr. Wormser outlined the recent progress made in its preparation and disclosed for the first time several features to be included.

A full sized coal mine shaft to be sunk in the ground beneath the museum was one of the features revealed by Mr. Wormser. Visitors will be allowed to step on an elevator, descend underground and view the subterranean coal veins and equipment exactly as in a real mine. Above will be a replica of the exterior mining machinery.

Niagara falls, the Panama canal a...l the Chicago drainage canal will be reproduced in separate exhibits with hydro-electric machinery, boats and locks operating at the touch of a button. Another attraction will be a steel mill in operation, with the fires produced by optical illusions. A cotton gin will be operated in one corner of the building.

The plan of the museum builders is to present a bird's-eye view of the progress of science and industry, agriculture and forestry, industrial chemistry, motive power, communication, geology, and mining and metallurgy.

Waldemar Kaempffert of New York, who served as temporary director of the museum, resigned March 1 after completing his work of outlining the plans. J. R. Van Pelt is the acting director. His permanent successor is to be selected by a committee of trustees composed of Mr. Wormser, W. R. Abbott, Sewell L. Avery, and Harold H. Swift.

Mooseheart History Told by Ex-Judge at Chicago Session

The history of Mooseheart, Ill., and the Loyal Order of Moose which founded and maintains the community, was reviewed yesterday by Edward J. Henning, former federal judge of California, in a speech before members of the organization celebrating the eleventh anniversary of the local group, at the Hotel Sherman.

Judge Henning recalled that he had helped select the site of Mooseheart some 15 years ago. Today, he pointed out, Mooseheart has a population of 1,400 and about forty buildings.

"Mooseheart is a town individual to itself," he said. "It is in a way a laboratory of experimental education. There are no formal laws, yet it is the most law abiding town in the world. Educators come even from Europe to study our methods."

THE STAGE

"APRON STRINGS."

A comedy by Dorrance Davis; given at The Playhouse, April 12, 1931, with Jefferson De Angelis in the leading role, under the management of George M. Wintz.

THE CAST.

Hester.....Genevieve Frizelle
Mrs. Olwell.....Maidel Turner
Inez Wakefield.....Zamah Cunningham
Barbara Olwell.....Joan Winters
Daniel Curtis.....Edmund George
Ezra Bunniwell.....Jefferson De Angelis

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

A SLIGHTLY fantastic variation on the mother-in-law joke, in three acts of farcical comedy, has taken up its abode at the Playhouse under the title of "Apron Strings." It is offered by our Mr. Wintz, the aggressive impresario who recently emerged from the hinterlands with ambitions to keep the Chicago stage well supplied with humorous aspects of plain American domesticity. It may be called a sequel to "Jonesy," although it is much more "sophisticated" in tone than that frolic among the Harold Teens.

The mother-in-law of "Apron Strings" had departed for the heavenly shore, but her dead hand weighs heavily upon her son, a young man striving to establish a world's record for duration of filial piety. In life, she had written letters to the lovelorn for the newspapers; and she had left a trunkful of these documents for the guidance of her offspring in emergencies, especially those pertaining to courtship and matrimony. He strives nobly to apply the preachments of "Pansy Pomeroy" [his mother's pseudonym] to his marriage with a "modern" girl; and then the fun and the trouble begin, strictly according to formula.

As a prolonged mother-in-law joke, "Apron Strings" would wear thin in its first act if that Ol' Debbil Sex didn't start strutting around. But after the wedding the play begins to warm up. In a polite way it even becomes bold, and invades that realm of popular science usually referred to as "What a young bride should know." In other words, its situations deal with a marriage that isn't a marriage because of the cautious chivalry of "Pansy Pomeroy's" misguided son, with a slow husband and an impatient bride.

It's a prim little play, but it does not sidestep the biological facts of the conjugal relationship. It's a polite little play, but it refuses to be Victorian. It's a meager little play, but its clockwork ticks away in a stimulating rhythm. It will serve neatly, I believe, to keep the Playhouse open through the spring.

Jefferson De Angelis, veteran of many comic operas and rival to De Wolf Hopper for the title of grand old man of mirth, is the chief personality of the excellent cast. He appears as a lawyer who adjusts the domestic row—a shrewd, worldly old scalawag who believes that in cases of this kind whisky is the best remedy. Mr. De Angelis contributes a character study as mellow and genial as that with which he graced "The Royal Family" a couple of seasons back. He is as smooth as an old glove, and as charming as a friendly mandarin.

Edmund George, playing the young husband, causes me to believe that Manager Wintz has made a discovery. He gets sympathy and plausibility into an incredible character. He looks, moreover, something like Alfred Lunt, and acts as if he were aware of the resemblance. Joan Winters is attractive and convincing as the disappointed bride; Frank Monroe is skillful as a normal American father; and Maidel Turner achieves a picturesque characterization of the other mother of the story.

The neat, smooth performance of "Apron Strings" suggests that our Mr. Wintz means to do well by his constituents.

"When Father Smiles" ended its engagement and its life at the Cort theater last Saturday night, and the heart of De Wolf Hopper, its star, is low indeed. . . . "Three Little Girls" is announcing its "last weeks" at the Great Northern, which may be taken to mean that it will close April 25, after a memorable run of thirty-two weeks.

Doctor Tells Plans for Best Medical Center

Project Includes Changes in County Hospital.

PLANS for the reorganization of the Cook county hospital to make it the world's largest medical center are to be put into effect within the next few days. That was announced by Dr. John R. Harger, president elect of the Chicago Medical society, in a bulletin sent out yesterday.

The hospital reorganization program, prepared by representatives of the medical society and the city's four largest medical colleges, will be submitted to the membership of the society for final approval at a meeting tomorrow night, Dr. Harger said. It then will be referred to the county board. That group has indicated its acceptance.

Dr. Harger headed the medical society committee which acted with the cooperation of the deans of the medical schools of the Universities of Chicago, Illinois, Northwestern, and Loyola. The reorganization of the hospital is proposed under a program involving fourteen points. These include:

Conduct of the hospital by an executive committee representing the county board, the hospital's physicians and surgeons, the universities desiring to participate, and the Chicago Medical society.

Members of the staff would be selected by civil service examinations, as in the past, but more attention would be given to selection and training of younger men.

A hospital statistician would be appointed to study the results in the various hospital services and to stimulate competition between them.

Any recognized medical college, meeting the requirements set forth by the county board, would be permitted to use the hospital under certain conditions prescribed by the board. A division would be established for each college participating as well as an "open" division not connected with any college.

The reorganization plans contemplate that each medical college should pay the expenses of its division of the hospital, and that the county board should guarantee a minimum of 250 beds to the use of each school for a minimum period of ten years. Each school would furnish its quota of staff attendants, associates, clerks, and other employés.

It is further provided in the program that the present pathological department of the hospital should be augmented from time to time at the expense of the participating medical colleges, and that provision be made for the establishment of post-graduate teaching.

Dr. Harger explained that it is the hope of the sponsors of the program to have it in full operation before the opening of the world's fair in 1933.

Exciting Living Lacks Real Happiness, Says Dr. Fosdick, in Talk

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of the new Riverside church, New York, preaching last night at the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, declared that happiness and enthusiasm for living cannot come from excitement. Such sort of living, he asserted, results in boredom and disillusionment.

The New York preacher attacked present day individualism. He admitted that a selfishly managed life can accumulate many of the material things, but the individualist always will lack one thing—zest in living. What is the good, asked Dr. Fosdick, of having tables heaped with alluring food, if its owner has no appetite?

"Let every individualist take note," Dr. Fosdick said, "no man can be happy without belonging to some one. We are not individuals. We are social beings. No man is whole in himself; his friends and family are the rest of him. The worst hell is to go home and find no one depending on him."

Cleanup Week to Start April 20; Aid from Cermak

Chicago's annual "cleanup, paintup and plantup" campaign will start on April 20, the Chicago Association of Commerce, sponsors of the movement, announced yesterday. Programs are now being planned by the school children, who are the chief participants in the annual event. To lend added impetus this year, Mayor Cermak made his first proclamation on Saturday, giving official indorsement to the project. The campaign will continue for two weeks.

HOOVER TO ADDRESS RED CROSS MEETING IN CAPITAL TODAY

Washington, D. C., April 12.—(AP)—The Red Cross, which engaged in a lengthy controversy with the senate over drought relief, will tell the country why it chose to rely on voluntary aid at a four day convention opening here tomorrow.

The annual meeting will be opened with an address by President Hoover, who also is president of the society. The executive supported the relief agency in its refusal to accept a $25,000,000 relief appropriation Democrats and western Republicans got through the senate, but which failed in the house.

Secretary Wilbur and James L. Fieser, vice president in charge of domestic operations, also will speak, while John N. McDuffee, Grand Rapids youth, will represent seven million school children enrolled in the Junior Red Cross.

Besides drought relief, the convention will give its attention to child health, aid to former service men and their families, and plans for the forthcoming celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Red Cross.

City's Beauties Told by Camera in This Show

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

FOR the second year the camera has spoken. Photographs of Chicago and the land around Chicago make an interesting exhibit in the Narcissus room in Marshall Field's, and again the exhibit is sponsored by the Women's Chicago Beautiful association. The photographs prove that the introduction of "beautiful" after Chicago in the name of the association is not misplaced.

As a member of the jury I am safe in saying that when the pictures went up before us for selection time and again the classes were small and the variety negligible. Chicago seemed infinitely fuller of possibilities than these men and women had discovered in their search for pictorial material. Now that the hanging is accomplished, some of that bitterness is wiped out. The jury, in spite of itself, has done a successful job, and Chicago is shown in many of its most beautiful aspects.

Elaine Kern, a woman among many masculine contributors, is responsible for a number of excellent pictures. Her work has quality and an honest pictorial value. George H. High won a first award with "The March Blizzard," a delicately handled long vista of the Lake Shore drive lake promenade north from Oak street. THE TRIBUNE came into its own with awards of importance to Godfrey Lundberg and Edward McGill, both men having several excellent pictures to their credit. The Chicago Camera club made a brilliant showing with photographs by John Skara, Paul Wierum, W. C. West, Maximilian Kern, Harry C. Phibbs, and Clayton Mogg, to mention but a few.

"Mr. Stock Takes a Lesson," by Jun Fujita, is one of the outstanding photographs in the show. Others that stand out are "Orient," by Edward McGill; "Young Inventors," by J. L. Nolan; "Jewels of the Night" and "Belmont Harbor," by Godfrey Lundberg; "War Birds," by John Skara; "Archers," by A. J. Krupy; "Adler Planetarium Through Rocks," by Hedrich-Blessing studios; "Fishermen, South Chicago," by Clyde Brown, and "Fountain of Time," by Heinz Timm. This list is incomplete, but the pictures are there for you to make your own choice until April 18. The grand first prize will be by popular vote.

One Unfortunate Marriage Doesn't Preclude Another

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"This is my second marriage and because I had so much trouble with the first I stayed single twelve years before taking the second plunge. My present husband is a childhood sweetheart. He was a heavy drinker before we were married, and since our marriage, over two years ago, I've been trying to make him see that his drinking habit is breaking up our home.

"My mother lives with us and she sees everything and keeps on telling me about it. I am much in love with him and will do anything for him. Don't you think that if he really is in love with me he would stop drinking? It upsets me so, I am unable to do my work properly. I still go to business. HEARTBROKEN."

One experience doesn't seem to train women to use their heads on a second choice, does it? That's the thing you observe about so many of the second and the third marriage attempts. Not all of them, of course.

But after years of trying to decipher reasons for marriage moves, about all you can do is to throw up your hands despairingly and admit there "jest ain't any explaining." A heavy drinker is one of the things one broken marriage ought to warn against. It's reasonable to assume that after a first marriage and a twelve year wait one had reached the full age of reasoning, if ever one was going to achieve it. But, as I say, reasoning seems to be the thing that isn't mixed into the formula. It would go pretty hard with the "drunks" if it were—and it just seems as if there were a special Providence taking care of them through the agency of some long suffering, patient, loving woman.

As for the question of whether because a man is really in love with a woman he should give up drinking—how many, many women have argued that way only to find the craving for liquor a stronger instinct than the love a man may, indeed, have for a woman. If women have a taste for martyrdom, they will have it perfectly satisfied by marrying a heavy drinker.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Takes Two to Quarrel.

"Dear Miss Blake: When I quarrel with my friend he gets angry, but later says he's sorry. Please advise. "LAURA."

He may start the trouble, but if you would refuse to be a party to it, he'd be more agreeable, too.

John Falconer, a successful artist, meets Hilary Revel, author of true to life stories. Their acquaintance grows into a friendship. John tells Hilary of his daughter Judith, John says, had married unhappily. John's sister Gertrude came to live with them. Shortly after their return John and Judith leads a lonely life in his home. When Aunt Gertrude hears of her brother's return she writes him, asking him to send his former nurse, Tracy, to her. John thinks it unfair to drag Hilary completely into his affairs. He has had enough interference from his wife. His wrath explodes when he learns that Judith, a waif of dubious parentage among the servants, is badly treated by Tracy. Hilary, who delivers cream for the dairy where she delivers cream for the dairy, is sorry for Judith. Tracy meets Hilary for tea and tells her that Judith's interference makes her rebuff Prue. Hilary and Judith meet on the beat home. Tracy is sent away to visit Judith. Prue is given a treatment of the little girl.

Falconer leaves town on a business trip and decides to write to John about her daughter. Tracy becomes unbearably abusive to Prue. Prue, after a few altercations, runs away to Prue. Tracy is dismissed immediately by his sister.

THE SIXTH JOURNEY

BY ALICE GRANT ROSMAN

SYNOPSIS.

John Palmer, a successful architect, returning home to England from Cape Town, finds Hilary Revel, author of travel books, on shipboard. During the journey home the acquaintance grows into a friendship neither wishes to end.

John tells Hilary of his daughter Judith, born of a café singer while he was a soldier. John says, had magnanimously adopted the child. Hilary suspects such magnanimity. John's sister Gertrude became Judith's legal guardian when his wife died, shortly after their return John and Hilary become engaged.

Judith leads a lonely life in her aunt's home. Her cousin Prue is her only friend. Prue's aunt Gertrude hears of her brother's engagement she sends Judith to a farm to stay with a former nurse, Tracy. John is uneasy about Judith not being in school. He is loath to drag Hilary continually into the question of the child and Hilary feels he has had enough interference in caring for Judith. John writes Gertrude for the first time his wrath explodes when she replies that she cannot, as a decent citizen, send the delicious parentage among other children.

Judith is badly treated by Tracy. She makes friends with Clive Herpenden, to whose cottage he delivers cream for the old servant. Judy, having received no mail, writes Hilary in Prue.

Prue visits Hilary for tea and tries to enlist her aid for Judith. Hilary's vow bot Prue makes her rebuff. Prue. They run into Tim de Morreville, whom Hilary and Prue met on the boat home. Tim drives Prue home and makes an engagement to drive Hilary down to visit Judith. Prue sees and talks to Judy and is indignant at Tracy's treatment of the little girl.

Hilary leaves town on a business trip. Hilary, thinking over the problem of Judith, decides to write to John about her and her letter is a great relief to him.

Tracy becomes unbearably abusive to Judy, and Judy, crushed by the woman's cruel words, runs away to Prue. When John returns and hears of Judith's disappearance he comes immediately to his sister's home.

INSTALLMENT XLIII.

BLACKMAIL THREATS.

"But Hilary! My dear, don't tell me she suspects?"

"Suspects!" cried John. "Hilary has known the whole story for weeks. Do you think I would marry the girl without telling her?"

"You've lost your senses!" said Gertrude sharply. "Have you no regard for me then? And my children, and all I've done? As for telling . . . I did not tell Sylvia before you married her, if I remember."

"When I married Sylvia I had no idea of Judith's existence, and when I found out I considered it injudicious to enlighten her. That was my affair. Don't you tell some women what you can't tell others, and I am more than sorry Sylvia ever found out."

"O, I'm with you there, quite."

"But for a different reason, I think. It's no good, Gertrude. It's finished. Your lights are not my lights, and when Judy is found there will be an end of this guardian and adoption nonsense, and no more hiding away of that badly skeletons. She shall have what she should have had long ago, if I had not been a blind fool, the protection of her father's name, and the love of people who will not regard her as a danger to society because her mother and I, for reasons of our own, neglected the marriage service."

"I cannot argue with a madman!" cried Gertrude. "What of my career? What of dear Sylvia's wishes in her will? You can't get past the law."

"Suppose you leave Sylvia out of this, and the law, too. I've told you before, she had no power of disposition over the child, but if you drive me to it I'll take the matter to court, so I warn you. However, I can't stand here talking all night, Gertrude. Just try to think, will you, how you would feel, if a child of yours was perhaps sleeping, starved, under a hedge at this moment, if not something worse? I want the exact address of the farm, John, or some such name, Hilary thought. I'll see this woman, and if she's responsible, my God, I'll break every bone in her body. Well, out with it. Or shall I go to your friend, the inspector, for it, and give him the whole story?"

"So it's blackmail, is it? You'll answer for that."

"John, John! Of course I'll give you the address . . . It's Beech farm, Beech, Bedfordshire . . . I've always done everything for you, and you treat me as if I were a murderer or a pickpocket!"

From the hall door her brother turned back to say in a tone of fury:

"Better pray you're not the former!" Then he was gone.

Going out to the car, he asked the chauffeur how long it would take to drive to Bedfordshire, and found this could be done easily in an hour and a half; at this time of night there was little traffic on the roads. There was a point in being there before dawn, he supposed miserably, though he longed to be off, but he told the man to stop at the first likely place where they could get a cup of coffee, and then to make for their destination, taking, when they were out of London, a roundabout course. He had a forlorn hope that a some by-road he might come upon the fugitive, though he knew it was absurd. Nearly forty-eight hours . . . and without a penny to buy food! He had never looked a robust child either. God! poor Jenny's daughter.

At dawn broke he stopped the car beside the farm and, seeing no signs of life within, he walked to the edge of Judy's wood and plunged into it . . . he could keep still no longer, movement was a relief, but the beauty which had so charmed the child in this lovely place he did not even see.

The waking birds maddened and mocked him, and at last he turned back to the farm. Smoke was issuing from the chimney by now. As he turned in at the gate, Tracy came to the kitchen door and with a start of surprise rushed out to meet him.

"O, Mr. Falconer, sir, you're that early, you've taken my breath away! Is there any news?"

"I've come to you for news and information, too," retorted Falconer tartly. "I wish to know exactly what occurred here yesterday morning, and what has been done to find Miss Judith? We'll have the full story, man, and quick about it."

"I've already gave the full story to Mrs. Livingstone as is her guardian, sir," said Tracy, beginning to show temper.

"I'm sure my dear late lady always trusted me with Judith, the naughty little thing, wandering away like that at her play."

"So she wandered away at her play? You have a different story for each inquirer, I see, Tracy. Now which, I wonder, is the true one?"

"I'm not answerable to you!" cried the woman, turning on him in a fury.

"You will be answerable to the police in about two minutes," said Falconer. "I'll have the truth out of you, if I have to bring the whole constabulary with me to get it!"

"You!" she sneered. "Not you, you won't. Nice thing for your latest lady to hear about. I know too much to be scared of your threats, Mr. Falconer . . . My poor darling mistress crying in my arms, telling me how she'd deceived her."

Falconer, with difficulty restrained himself from knocking her down.

"So it's blackmail, is it? You'll answer for that, and you'll be damned sorry if you're not answering a charge of manslaughter as well. You are sorry even to keep poor little secrets of the mistress you pretend to have been so fond of. I am now going to the chief constable of the county, and you will repeat your pretty story before him and a couple of sergeants, or I'll know the reason why."

"Yes, I daresay, you can't bluff me, and if you did bring 'em, I could have you a few things that wouldn't look too nice for you and your sister!" cried Tracy in a loud voice. "Good reading, Mrs. Livingstone's letters to me about your daughter that has to be watched so careful and kep' away from other children, and why? O, they wouldn't ask that, not them! I done my duty and the letters'll prove it, never you fear!"

Falconer, ignoring her, walked into the yard and shouted for the farmer.

"Ay," said a voice, and a man came shambling into view from the stable.

"Are you the farmer?"

"That I be, sir."

"Then I make you responsible for this woman until I return with the police. See that she doesn't set foot outside the farm."

"You don't say she's done nothing to the little girl, sir!" exclaimed the man in horror. "An evil tongue she always had, but she'd never go as far as to . . ."

"That remains to be seen. She has just attempted to blackmail me, and she shall repeat her threats before the police within the next few hours. Now do what I say."

Falconer walked out of the farm. He heard the farmer's voice raised in alarm behind him, and a woman's laugh.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

On the Wrong Night.

My chum had told "our gang" about her handsome cousin who had come to visit them for a while. She invited us to an evening party, and, of course, we were all set to make a hit with the handsome cousin.

I put twice the usual time on my preparation that evening. My father drove me to the scene of battle and I rang the bell with much self assurance, feeling I looked my best. Blank looks on all faces, no one dressed for the party, no preparations of any kind. Could I have found the proverbial hole in the floor I would have quickly disappeared. I had come on the wrong night!

However, I met the cousin, we enjoyed the evening very much, and the real night of the party he came and escorted me.

Crocus Time Coaxes Many to Take Walks

BY THALIA

IT'S crocus time, and as the pert little blossoms begin poking their heads up through new lawns and the lilac buds begin to purple the all year around dwellers in the "country" are feeling amply compensated for the chilly discomforts they endure in the winter time.

Out in Barrington a group of energetic outdoor enthusiasts have been getting together on Saturdays and Sundays for long tramps through the fields and lanes.

The "walking club" meets at somebody's house for luncheon and then they all set out to do about five miles or so of vigorous hiking. The John W. Esmonds, the Robert Buckleys, the Lawrence G. Hallbergs, the Robert G. Meads, the Sanford Whites, and the Russell Pettingills compose the group, and frequently they take along a weekend town visitor on their rambles. [The latter usually finds it pretty strenuous, too.]

Magnolia Tree Adds to Joys of Lake Forest.

One of the loveliest and most interesting spring phenomena hereabouts is the George A. Seaverns' famous magnolia tree in Lake Forest. Mrs. Seaverns noticed just yesterday morning that the buds are beginning to look faintly pink. That means that unless we have pretty bad weather—down to 15 degrees above or so—the tree will be glorious in a week or ten days. Last year, the frost nipped the buds and the blossoming wasn't so beautiful as usual. Every year there are hundreds of people who view the tree, which is not the only magnolia tree in this vicinity, but is the only one of its particular kind.

Still another sign of spring are the golfers at Onwentsia. Although the official opening isn't until May 16, the privileges of the club were available to its members beginning on Saturday.

The American Friends of China are to have a supper meeting next Sunday evening at the Casino. Dr. Philip Fugh of the Chinese Imperial museum is to be guest of honor and will speak. There will be a brief annual meeting and election of officers after supper. "Members who possess objects of Chinese art," according to the invitation, "are urged to bring examples from their collections to show to other members." They are asked to notify Mrs. George T. Langhorne, who is in charge of the reservations, of their intention to bring such objects.

Also next Sunday is the annual exhibition by the professional members of the Arts club. It is to be from 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon until 7:30. The announcement cards make several things quite clear. There is to be tea, there will be no children permitted, exhibitors may bring as many guests as they like, and the other members one guest each.

Elizabeth Crews Married to Hugh Breckenridge in East.

Around and about—Miss Muriel Winston was one of the bridesmaids in the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Crews and Hugh Breckenridge in New York City on Saturday . . . the John Payne Kelloggs have gone back to New York City for a while . . . Mr. and Mrs. George Robb Collins have gone south for a week, and have turned over their studio apartment to Edgar Miller, modern artist, for an exhibit of his paintings, wood carvings, stained glass, and ceramics while they're away. . . . Mrs. Edward L. Hasler and Miss Constance have returned from Santa Barbara and a visit with Miss Gwethalyn Jones, Miss Hasler's godmother, and have opened their Lake Forest house . . . the John R. Winterbothams and young Master Johnny were to return yesterday afternoon from their Bermuda trip . . . Miss Dorothy Liggett of Sewickley, Pa., has been visiting Mrs. James D. Cunningham of 900 North Michigan avenue . . . Miss Emily Larned is to sail tomorrow on the Carinthia for a spring Mediterranean cruise.

Mrs. Samuel Chase's jingling pen drips a spring poem for the White Elephant tea at the Casino on Tuesday, the 21st:

"White Elephants," like unemployed,
Are economic waste,
But if you bring them to our tea
We soon will have them placed.

The only requisite for admission to the tea is the presentation of a "White Elephant" that will subsequently be sold at the Rummage shop on Ohio street.

"Years of Grace" Will Be Discussed by Author.

Miscellany—Margaret Ayer Barnes is to speak on "Years of Grace" at the Woman's Athletic club Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. . . . Helen Hayes and the "Petticoat Influence" cast are to drop in at the Lower North Community council benefit at The Bendix gallery Friday night after theater time . . . the American Opera society is to hold its annual business meeting and a short program on Saturday . . . the straw has been taken off of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's tulip beds and pale buds are showing. . . . Mrs. Alvin C. McCord and Mrs. Charles Lewis Drane are to give a tea on Saturday for Mrs. Drane's daughter, Elinor Drane Kryss and Malcolm Bemis Conant, whose engagement was announced recently.

Mary Garden's Secretary Denies She's Quitting Opera

MONTE CARLO, April 12.—(AP)—Mary Garden's secretary tonight issued an emphatic denial of published reports that the famous singer was contemplating retiring from the opera. There is no truth in those reports, the secretary said, and Miss Garden is not thinking of leaving the stage or of canceling her presen contracts. Loveliest Faces Are Not Covered with Cosmetics

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The hats off the face put women in several distinct classes—those with a "finished" facial look and those without being possibly the two most outstanding.

"Finished" is used here in the sense that applies to a suave, courteous manner—to anything, in fact, so perfect in detail that fault cannot be found with it, no matter how you look. "Polished," would do just as well—except polish suggests a shine, which, of course, our best faces never do exhibit.

But about the face that looks well with the aforementioned type of hat there is a freshly massaged look, a look of extreme care about makeup and eyebrow neatness. There is a certain quality of "freshness," although the skin itself may not belong to youth.

For some time now, just from peering into faces and asking (not aloud) what's wrong with that face, including my own, often, I have leveloped rather an obsession on the subject of overpowdering and thereby getting a dryer skin effect than is necessary. After all, there is a certain quality of "moistness" about young skin beauty. Not greasiness—but moistness, a skin that looks soft to the touch. And that's the thing older women should strive to get and can get, too. Especially is it needed where the back-of-the-head hat exposes the face full view.

Foundation cream will do it for some women. Others will need an extra nightly application of a good tissue cream. Some even may need a good wrinkle cream. But the thing I'm driving at is not to let your face have a dried-out look which your too heavy powder layers frequently give. Around the eyes, anyway, you can get that slight moistness of skin by greasing a finger tip with your cream and letting it ride ever so lightly over the surface under the eye, on the lid and at outer eye edges.

It's sort of a "glistening" quality to aim for. As a matter of fact, some women look younger in the face who are extremely chary of powder. If lines and wrinkles are sharply etched often it is better not to gamble them into "snow-capped" little ridges with heavy powder. Not that I'm trying to discourage the use of powder, understand. I'd only like to see you try the experiment of slightly more exposed "glistening" skin surface and see if the effect isn't younger.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., April 12.—[Special.]—Allan Hoover, younger son of President and Mrs. Hoover, who will be an usher in the wedding party of Miss Gertrude Lamont and Charles E. Saltzman on May 2, arrived this morning at the White House to spend his spring vacation. He was joined shortly after by President and Mrs. Hoover on their return from the funeral of Speaker Longworth in Cincinnati.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S AND MISS' FROCK.

This smart interpretation of peplum styling will be found generally becoming. Panels front and back from waistline to hem create a lengthened line and conceal hip breadth. The softly draped cowl effect has a narrowing effect on the bodice. It's perfectly adorable in printed crêpe silk in the new purplish blue coloring and may be worn for shopping or for street wear.

Pattern No. 3017 is extremely simple to make. It may be had in sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires four yards of 39 inch material.

Bright Sayings of the Children

My little niece, aged 4, found an old wrist watch which had no crystal. She held it up to her mother and said, "Muddy, I believe this would be dandy if you had a new window for it."

B. F.

Arthur, aged 5, was crying over some trivial matter and his daddy asked, "What are all those tears for, Arthur?"

"Oh, I just put them there for trimming, Daddy," answered the boy, and smiled through the tears.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

C. V.: MOIST, PERSPIRING hands are annoying, to be sure, but there are lotions to be applied which will correct the condition. Have your druggist put up a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Apply it daily. My booklet on hands contains other suggestions.

K. S.: THE COLD SHOWER IS healthful, but it is not sufficient for cleanliness. In addition, several warm baths should be taken each week. These may be taken at night and the showers in the morning.

New Booklets Deal with Aspects of Child Training

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

As the notices of the new booklets which have been appearing at the head of this column must necessarily be brief, some fuller explanation of them may be in order. There are two things that I consider in deciding how a booklet for parents shall be made. One is what fathers or mothers ask for. The other is what treatment the subject makes possible.

For instance, some parents want reading matter so they can study and think on one special subject, or on child management in general. For them reading references both short and long are planned.

There are other mothers and fathers who ask not for reading suggestions, but for direct help in some very big problem, like understanding the adolescent boy and girl, or child management in general, or the sex education of the child. Now both these subjects are too wide and deep to be covered in one small booklet. So, for those big subjects I arrange a booklet which has an introduction containing some general suggestions for management, followed by good reading references.

Up to the present our booklets have been written on those two plans. But the booklets in the new series which have been announced recently and will continue to be, follow a somewhat different plan. They deal with one aspect at a time of child management, like gaining obedience or helping a child to overcome shyness. Because each subject is so much more limited in scope it is possible to discuss it directly in the booklet. So a mother who is, we'll say, overworked and has never time to do much reading will find in it information ready to use. These new booklets are also written in such a way as to give help when it is needed at once, as when a father or mother feel they cannot wait to learn general principles of child management before clearing up a behavior difficulty—a problem that is in a way an emergency.

The new booklets, which are being announced now, will be followed by others during the spring.

Lace Tunic for the Afternoon Costume

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Lace is not only being used to make or to trim many of the smartest new evening and formal afternoon gowns being shown in Paris now, but lace blouses are being worn with all sorts of suits, from those of silk or fine wool voile to those of sturdier tweed and diagonal woolen.

Allover lace blouses are being trimmed with rows and rows of Valenciennes edging. Wool lace is making suits and dresses. Silk lace triangles are being shown by Louiseboulanger with her wool tailored suits.

A long tunic of allover Venetian lace lends an extremely dressy touch to the Redfern afternoon suit of black crêpe de chine, sketched today. Venetian lace, by the way, is one of the most popular spring laces, being used for trimming, blouses and so on by Chanel, Lanvin, Jeanny, and many others.

This tunic has a simple bodice with a Greek draped décolleté front and back. The lace border is used to finish the hem, and the hem of the narrow black crêpe underskirt is cut in scallops to echo its outline.

The coat sleeves are interesting. They are cut in gores, each gore finishing in a scallop. This same effect is carried out by scalloped edged godets that form the fronts of the coat skirt. The back is plain. Note that this coat does not meet in front, showing quite a bit of the lace tunic, for that is one of the earmarks of new afternoon coat fashions. It has a collar made of thick braid of the black crêpe de chine. A narrow crêpe de chine belt draws it in at the natural waistline.

Food Talk.

Mrs. C. R. asks: "Just what is almond paste? Is it something you can buy prepared or do you make it from almond meats?"

Almond paste may be bought in stores that have large baked food departments or that cater to the baker and confectioners' trade. It is prepared from ground blanched sweet almonds that have had their oil extracted. The product is a light yellow, stiff paste about the consistency of putty. It usually comes in tins or drums and the smallest of these weighs five pounds. Quantities as small as ¼ pound may be procured by the housewife, however. The paste keeps well in the refrigerator so the purchase of a larger amount is practical.

Almond paste makes delicious coffee cake, cake, cookies, macaroons, pie and cake fillings, and not a large quantity is required to give a distinct almond nut flavor. The well known confection called marzipan which is often formed into the shape of fruit and vegetables requires almond paste, too.

Almond paste may be made in the home, but the blanching, grinding, and pounding of the nuts to a paste is considerable work and there is not much money saved. The paste costs from $1.25 to $1.50 a pound.

Another Mrs. C. R. writes, "I never have luck with the meringue on my lemon pie. It rises and browns nicely but when it is taken out of the stove it falls flat. Why are meringues on bakers' pies so nice?"

I suspect you do not bake your meringue long enough and slowly enough. If a meringue is tough it has been either cooked at too high a temperature or there is not enough sugar added to the whites. Quick cooking at a high temperature causes a meringue to wrinkle, shrink, and liquefy. Undercooked whites are not firm enough to hold up their own weight and naturally they must fall. Cook slowly for 15 minutes.

A little cream of tartar, ¼ teaspoon for each two egg whites used, may be added to harden the albumen in the egg whites and hold up the meringue. This is advisable where three or four egg whites are used in the meringue. Sometimes baking powder is used in place of the cream of tartar. Meringues do not improve on standing, therefore such pies should be consumed as soon as possible. Meringue on bakers' pies are nice because they are properly baked and because they use enough egg whites to give a thick meringue.

Mrs. C. R. requests a recipe for lemon cream pie. I am taking her request literally and am supplying one that calls for milk. Lemon pie made with water is often called cream pie, too.

LEMON CREAM PIE FILLING.

1 whole egg.
3 egg yolks.
1 egg white.
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind.
1 1-3 cups milk.

Mix the flour and sugar thoroughly and put them into the top of a double boiler. Beat the whole egg and the three egg yolks well and add these to the flour and sugar and mix until smooth. Add lemon rind and juice to the egg sugar mixture in the double boiler. Add the milk which has been thoroughly heated, but not boiled and stir well to prevent lumping. Cook this mixture over boiling water for 15 minutes stirring constantly, then cover the double boiler.

Beat the one egg white until stiff, add about 1 tablespoon of the hot mixture from the double boiler, and beat until well mixed. Add 4 or 5 more tablespoons of the hot mixture and combine in the same manner. Pour this egg white mixture into the hot filling, stirring the latter vigorously during the addition. Cook the filling for about two minutes. Remove from the fire, beat until smooth, then pour into the pie crust. Prepare the meringue of the two egg whites and spread on the pie. Brown as directed. Do not cut the pie until cold.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 12.—If the White Sox win the season's opening game at Cleveland Tuesday the job will have to be turned out by Alphonse Thomas. Boss Bush, after master minding on this point for about a week, handed down his decision today, just before the Sox-Giants' spring tour ended with a battle which the dwellers in the polo grounds won, 7 to 4. It was McGraw's ninth victory of the barnstorming circuit, which involved 16 games.

AL THOMAS.

Selecting Thomas as the man to send the Sox off on the right foot is not without its hazards. The young man was a failure last season and this spring enrolled on the crippled list again with a sore shoulder. Last Wednesday at Greenville, S. C., he was asked to demonstrate his wares against the Giants. He did so, and while he wasn't exactly impressive, he was at least good enough eventually to win the nomination over Pat Caraway, the only other candidate.

Rookie Stops Sox.

The last battle of the pre-season series found Hal McKain lacking in the things needed to stop the Giants. Another complication was that the Sox hitters were considerably embarrassed by John Berly, a rookie from the Rochester club.

McKain, however, immediately cracked under the strain of prosperity, and his day was ruined with two Giant runs in the fifth and four in the sixth.

The Giants didn't lose any time giving their 15,000 attending admirers something to shout about. They hit McKain for a run right in the first inning. Shorty Critz led off with a single to center. Leach popped out and Lindstrom sent Critz to third on a hit past Blue. Leslie, taking Bill Terry's place, hit a long fly to Watwood in left and Critz scored. Tate juggled Watwood's return throw so much that Lindstrom dashed to third, but McKain escaped further damage by walking Ott and personally throwing out Marshall.

Sox Score in Fourth.

Berly's pitching was so puzzling for the Sox that the fourth inning rolled around before they could score a run. Marshall aided them by booting Reynolds' grounder. Simons immediately drove Reynolds to third by doubling and the run scored on Appling's deep fly to Ott.

The Sox scored three runs in the fifth. McKain walked and was caught trying to reach third on Cissell's single. Cissell went to second on the play and home on Blue's hit. Reynolds finished it with a home run inside the park.

The Giants retrieved two of the runs in their fifth by bunching three hits. Critz walked with one out. Leach singled and Critz went to third. Lindstrom, who refuses to stay off the base lines, hit safely to center, Critz scoring. The bases were filled when Leslie was credited with a hit that McKain should have held. Ott then hit a long fly on which Leach scored. This gave the Sox a 4 to 3 lead.

Vergez Stars Triple.

The four runs that put the Sox out of business in the sixth resulted from the cooperation of nine Giants. Vergez tripled to open the inning. Hogan singled. Berly laid down a squeeze bunt and McKain, instead of making an easy play at first, threw to the plate. Vergez was home by that time. Ott was called out on strikes and Leach walked. Lindstrom's third single sent Berly home. Then Leslie screened a triple off the left field concrete, scoring Leach and Lindstrom.

The Sox took their kit bags and moved out of here early this evening. They headed for Toledo, where they play the Mudhens tomorrow. As soon as that matter is disposed of they'll jump on a train and double back to Cleveland, where they hope to enjoy a night of sound sleep before taking part in the season's maiden battle, which probably will find the skilled Wesley Ferrell opposing them.

A COUPLE OF NEATE STOPS

Vic Neate (center), goalkeeper of the Chicago Bricklayers, does a little high jumping to block a kick in the national championship soccer match between the Brickies and the New York Yankees at Mills stadium yesterday. The game ended in a 1 to 1 overtime tie. On the left are Hugh Davidson of the Brickies and Bert Patenaude of the Yankees, while Bob Gregg of the Brickies is at the extreme right.

GARDNER, GOLF PRO AT EXMOOR CLUB, IS DEAD

Stewart Gardner, golf professional at the Exmoor club for the last ten years, died yesterday at his home, 1010 Green Bay road, Highland Park, after a lingering illness. He was 53 years old.

Gardner, a native of Prestwick, Scotland, was one of the first of the Scottish professionals to come to the United States. In 1899 he took his first position at Lenox, Mass. Later he was professional successively at the Garden City Golf club, Long Island; the Exmoor club of Chicago, the Old Elm club of Chicago, and then at Exmoor again.

Second in 1902 Open.

Teamed with Walter Travis, Gardner won several minor titles from 1901 to 1904. In 1902, he and Travis tied for second in the national open.

After his return to Exmoor in 1921, Gardner became a student of greens and golf course architecture and helped design several new courses. He also was active in the Professional Golfers' association, in which he held the office of vice president and secretary.

Was Great Teacher.

Alex Pirie, professional at Old Elm, last night spoke of Gardner's death as a great loss to golf.

"He was one of the best teachers the game ever had," Pirie said. "He never won any major championships, but he was a steady player of great ability. He was known and respected by golfers all over this country and in Scotland."

Gardner was a bachelor. Funeral arrangements will not be made until word is received from relatives in the east.

GAR WOOD WILL ATTEMPT TO SET RECORD TODAY

Miami Beach, Fla., April 12.—(AP)—Gar Wood tomorrow hopes to establish a new world's motor boat speed record.

The engines of his Miss America IX. have been tuned, the bottom has been polished to reduce all possible resistance, and he awaits only favorable wind and weather conditions for his attempt to regain the water speed supremacy he recently lost to Kaye Don of England.

Don piloted his Miss England II. to a new world's record of 103.49 miles an hour at Buenos Aires, surpassing by only 1.234 miles an hour the former record set by Wood at 102.256.

The same east wind which blew across the course on Indian creek and prevented any speed trials yesterday continued to sweep in from the ocean tonight, bringing with it frequent rain squalls.

Wood said his runs could not be made until the wind was parallel with the course.

Neate makes another stop in the first period, with Patenaude rushing on him while Gregg stands by to help Vic. The latter scored the Brickies' goal on a penalty kick in the second half.

ONE GAME STANDS BETWEEN HAWKS AND PUCK TITLE

MONTREAL, Que., April 12.—[Special.]—The last hockey game of the season will be played here Tuesday night and at its conclusion either Les Canadiens or the Blackhawks will be the champions of the world.

There will be no tie; no more to come. Tuesday's decision is final, and, what is more, the deciding battle should be productive of another one of those epic struggles that have characterized Stanley cup competition this season.

The brilliant comeback of the flying Frenchmen last night, which equaled the miracle victory of the Hawks on Thursday, makes them the favorite in their home city to retain the crown. Canadien fans, carried to new heights of enthusiasm by the great showing of their club, are offering odds of 2 and 2½ to 1.

Of course, there isn't very much Chicago money up here, principally because there aren't many Chicagoans, but at that many of the National league stars who have been sitting in on the proceedings here have wagered on the Hawks, and even the tied up series doesn't give them any qualms.

There is nothing wrong with the Hawks physically; no injuries were reported, and it is certain that their mental attitude is not warped by the defeat. They all admit the chances are tougher now, but insist that they will come through.

The work of Adams, Ripley, Cook and Wentworth in this series has been noteworthy. The first ten minutes of Saturday night's encounter saw Ripley all over the ice, checking, passing and laying down that first pass for Gottselig to convert into a goal. And Ripley did it in spite of a badly banged up leg that threatened to keep him out for the rest of the series.

Tulsa's Bid for Stanley Cup Will Be Considered

OTTAWA, Ont., April 12.—(AP)—Tulsa's challenge for the Stanley cup will be considered by the cup's trustees when it is received, William Foran, president of the Ottawa Hockey association, said tonight.

Foran, who is custodian of the trophy along with P. D. Ross of Ottawa, stated, however, that no challenge from the newly crowned American hockey league champions had yet reached here. He would give no indication of the attitude he will take on the matter if a challenge is made.

After Tulsa won the American league championship at Kansas City Saturday night William F. Grant, president of the league, said the Oilers would challenge for the Stanley cup, emblem of the world's professional championship.

BRICKIES FIGHT YANKS TO 1-1 TIE IN TITLE SERIES

Gregg's Goal Puts Soccer Game in Deadlock.

The Chicago Bricklayers and the New York Yankees battled through a thirty minute overtime period to a 1 to 1 tie at Mills stadium yesterday in the second game of the National soccer championship series. The teams will clash again next Sunday at Sparta field.

The Brickies won the toss, and opened the game with the wind and sun behind them. Armstrong Patterson, president of the United States Football association, kicked off before a crowd of 9,500.

The Brickies forced a corner in the first minute of play, but Patenaude, the visitors' center forward, got away. He was stopped by Tom Scott, but came right back with a header that Neate did well to save.

Coutts Misses Goal.

Cuthbert then opened up the play for the Bricklayers, giving Coutts the ball in good position, but his effort went over the line. The referee allowed a corner against the Chicagoans and the free kick was taken by Thompson. Scott got possession of the ball and gave it to Coutts, whose shot skimmed over the crossbar. Patenaude again came into the picture with a try that Neate just picked off the ground.

Manager Alexander of the Brickies substituted Hughie Hill for Munro, who had too many fouls called against him and was checked by the referee. If Munro had been sent off the field for his rough play, a substitute would not have been allowed to take his place, with the result that the Brickies would have had to play with ten men.

Gonsalves Scores for Yankees.

Five minutes before half time, McNab of New York crossed the ball to Gonsalves, who headed past Neate for the first score. The Brickies continued to press for the remainder of the half, but failed to score.

The Brickies opened the second half by forcing a corner, but nothing resulted. Patenaude had two great attempts, but the Chicago goal keeper, Neate, made spectacular saves.

After twelve minutes' play, Greenlees, while in good position to shoot, was fouled by McGill, the New York full back, and from the resultant penalty kick, Gregg tied the score with a fast low shot.

Play Extra Period.

The home crowd was disappointed when Coutts, with nobody but the goalkeeper to beat, shot over the bar, missing the goal by a few inches.

At the end of the regular 90 minutes' play the score was still 1 to 1. An extra 30 minute period was ordered by the referee, but neither team added to its score. The lineup:

YANKEES (1).		BRICKIES (1).
Reder	G.	Neate
McGill	R. B.	Greer
Rebello	L. B.	Davidson
McPherson	R. H.	Thompson
Caldwell	C. H.	Scott
Ballantyne	L. H.	Orsilvie
McNab (C.)	C. R.	Greenlees
Nilsen	I. R.	Munro
Patenaude	C.	Coutts
Gonsalves	I. L.	Cuthbert (C)
White	O. L.	McLean

Goals—Gonsalves, Greer.
Substitutes—H. Hill for Munro; T. Hill for Orsilvie.
Referee—Jack Johnston.

VINES DEFEATS BRUCE BARNES FOR NET CROWN

Houston, Tex., April 12.—(AP)—Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena, Cal., won the singles' championship of the River Oaks Country club invitation tennis tournament today, defeating Bruce Barnes of the University of Texas in straight sets 6-2, 8-4, 10-8.

Barnes, tossed aside in the first two sets, made a stubborn attempt to prolong matters in the third but finally fell at the conclusion of 18 hard games.

Vines, 19 year old student of the University of Southern California, the eighth ranking player of the United States for 1930, showed consistent hard hitting. He played a superb all court game.

Major League Clubs Set for '31 Inaugural

A last minute inspection has convinced baseball's sixteen major league managers that all is well. They may not think so by the time July rolls around, but at the moment optimism is the keynote. There are no last place clubs in April managerial forecasts.

CONNIE MACK.

On the theory that what won last year should be good enough to win again, Connie Mack's Philadelphia Atheletics and Gabby Street's St. Louis Cardinals, champions respectively of the American and National leagues, will start the season tomorrow with lineups that closely approximate those that appeared in 1930. Eddie Orsatti will be in left field for the Cardinals but that's only because Chick Hafey is a holdout.

Cards Aren't Cinch.

The Cardinals may repeat, but the Cubs, Brooklyn Robins, New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates all look strong enough to have a hand in the awarding of any pennant.

The other three National league clubs, Boston Braves, Phillies and Cincinnati Reds, apparently will fight it out for the last three places, but the Braves may cause trouble.

A closer fight than usual looms in the American league where the Athletics may expect trouble from the Washington Senators, Cleveland Indians, New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers.

Of the other three clubs, the White Sox look strongest with Luzerne Blue at first base and Mel Simons in the outfield.

NEW YORK TEAMS REBUILT.

New York, April 12.—(AP)—New York's three major league baseball clubs, all rebuilt to some extent since last season, are considered as three contenders for the pennants, but there still are a few weak spots left which may cause trouble, most of them in the pitching line.

The Brooklyn Robins, who finished 1930 close to the top, look like the most improved team. Trades with the Phillies have brought them Frank O'Doul, to add batting strength in their outfield, and Fresco Thompson, to plug the hole at second base.

John McGraw, manager of the Giants, believes that placing Johnny Vergez at third base and shifting Freddy Lindstrom to right field has strengthened his lineup. The Giants are a bit shy on pitching strength, but hope Harold Schumacher may fill the requirements. McGraw probably will send the veteran spitballer, Clarence Mitchell, or Southpaw Bill Walker against Philadelphia in the opener.

The Yankees are New York's unknown quantity so far. Their new manager, Joe McCarthy, says his team seems strong, but pleads ignorance of the American league when it comes to predicting where they will finish. The illness of Pipgras was a serious blow to his pitching staff. Charley Ruffing or Henry Johnson probably will be selected to face the Red Sox Tuesday.

TIGERS RELY ON PITCHING.

Detroit, Mich., April 12.—(AP)—The Detroit American league baseball team will enter the pennant race with its strongest pitching staff in many years, a good infield and a mystery outfield.

Earl Whitehill, veteran southpaw pitcher, is slated to start the opening game Tuesday at St. Louis.

If Lefty Stewart pitches for the Browns, Manager Stanley Harris can send right hand batters to his outfield, Gerald Walker, Frank Doljack, and Ivey Shiver. He also has three outfielders to face right hand pitching, Roy Johnson, Johnny Stone, and Harvey Walker.

CARDS TO START REHM.

St. Louis, April 12.—(AP)—With the Cardinals picked to retain the National league pennant and the St. Louis Browns an uncertain quantity in the American league, due to most of the team being newcomers, the contribution of St. Louis to the 1931 baseball season will be of double interest.

Flint Rahm pitched the opening game in 1928, 1929, and 1930, all pen-

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kansas City, Mo., April 12.—Our fluctuating Cubs this afternoon washed away many of their spring sins by giving the Kansas City Blues a right merry three hit taming, 12 to 1. The victory enabled the Cubs to start for home with a spring record of 17 wins to 16 losses and 1 tie.

Perplexed for many days by his inability to find a pitcher of agreeable talent among his so-called first stringers, Manager Hornsby dipped into his second herd and came out with big Ed Baecht and Lon Warneke.

Big Ed worked five innings and allowed only two hits, a single with two out in the first inning, and another single which started the second inning. The only run made off Baecht was a result of one of the Cubs' three early outfield errors. It was a two base muff by Stephenson.

Warneke Breezes Through.

Warneke took over the pitching job in the sixth. He fanned Knothe and Brower, walked Pick and Grigsby, then fanned Nicholson. Thereafter Warneke, aided in one instance by Jurges' fielding, held the Blues to one hit, a double by Boken with two out in the ninth.

Gabby Hartnett led the hitting department with his No. 11 homer and a double. Lester Bell was runner up with a triple and a double. Cuyler and D. Taylor also knocked triples.

The Cubs got this afternoon's production under way in the second inning. Stephenson walked and stopped at third on Hartnett's double to the left field wall. Bell flied to Pick, and the runners held on. Stephenson scored and Hartnett pulled up at third when Knothe fumbled Grimm's grounder, Baecht fanned. Then Cuyler walked, filling the bases. English ran the count to three and two and then grounded out to Knothe to end the inning.

Wilson Misses Grounder.

The Blues had men on third and first, with one out in the second inning, but this progress was halted by a double play. Nicholson singled to center and went to second when, for the second time in the game, Wilson let an easy ground ball get away from him. Nicholson went to third on McMillan's fly to Wilson. Prather walked. Peters hit into a double play, English to Hornsby to Grimm.

Hartnett's bat was again the main factor in a four run onslaught in the third. Hornsby singled, and after Wilson had fanned, Stephenson walked. Gabby then knocked his homer over the distant field wall, scoring Hornsby and Stephenson. Bell followed with a triple and came home on Grimm's fly to Pick.

Five Runs After Two Outs.

After two were out in the fourth, Hornsby singled, Wilson was safe on an error and Stephenson walked, loading the bases. With everybody running, Pick dropped Hartnett's easy fly, Hornsby, Wilson, and Stephenson scoring and Hartnett reaching second. Bell's Texas leaguer dropped for a double between Brower and Grigsby, Hartnett scoring. Bell counted on Grimm's double to right, giving the Cubs a five run cluster.

In the Blues' fourth, Grigsby got to second on Stephenson's muff. He went to third on a wild pitch and scored while Hornsby was throwing out Nicholson.

In the sixth, Cuyler emerged from something of a hitting slump to score the eleventh Chicago run. He tripled to left and came home on English's fly. D. Taylor tripled with one out in the eighth and scored on Zack Taylor's infield out.

The Cubs left Kansas City tonight at 9 o'clock and are scheduled to arrive at the La Salle street station at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. There will be no workout at Wrigley field tomorrow.

EQUIPOISE GETS 1ST TEST AS 3 YEAR OLD TODAY

Runs on Havre de Grace Opening Card.

Baltimore, Md., April 13.—[Special.]—The spring race meeting will begin tomorow at Havre de Grace. Discussion was general here today as to how Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Equipoise, crack juvenile of 1930 and future book favorite for the Kentucky Derby, will fare. He is entered in the Glen Oaks purse, a six furlong test. He has been assigned top weight of 123 pounds.

If Equipoise starts, and there is every indication that he will, it will mark the first 1931 appearance of any of the top flight juveniles of a year ago.

Leads Juvenile Winners.

Equipoise wintered near here, at the Benning track just outside of Washington, and discussion of his chances for the Preakness and Derby, and other big 3 year old specials, has supplied one of the never failing topics of conversation since the eastern racing season opened at Bowie on March 30. Last year Equipoise was the greatest money winner in his division.

The horses, weights, probable jockeys, and probable odds for the Glen Oaks purse, six furlong feature on the opening day card at Havre de Grace tomorrow, follows:

Equipoise	123	Robertson	1-4
Dark Hero	108	Walters	10-1
Panetian	105	Esby	15-1
Sunny Lassie	110	Ellis	15-1
Sergt. Donaldson	108	Erickson	25-1
Bonstan	108	Madely	60-1
John F.	105	Ogrean	60-1

The behavior of Equipoise will attract a lot of attention tomorrow. He never has been a smart post horse, and in several races has been off so poorly that he had to be much the best of his field to win. Such was the case in the Pimlico futurity where he practically was left at the post.

Start Important Point.

Viewing Equipoise as a Derby prospect this point becomes very important because a horse that does not swing around the clubhouse turn at Churchill Downs in the first division, has scant chance of working his way up through the big field no matter how good he is.

The six that have been named against Equipoise should give him no trouble, although Dark Hero, Panetian and Sunny Lassie are not to be too lightly regarded. The last named was one of the most courageous fillies a year ago, but like Equipoise was hampered frequently by a slow beginning. She too is making her season's debut and so are Dark Hero and Panetian. Sergt. Donaldson was winner of the opening day feature on the charity program at Bowie.

KENTUCKY GETS READY

Louisville, Ky., April 12.—(AP)—With warm weather, preparations for the Kentucky Derby have been given added impetus in the Blue Grass state. Frequent rains have prevented many fast moves among eligibles quartered at Churchill Downs and Lexington.

Of the 1930 nominees for the 1931 Derby May 16, about sixty are on Kentucky soil, most of them in training. Among recent prominent arrivals at the Downs were Mrs. J. N. Crofton's Up, winner of the Agua Caliente Derby, and Prince d'Amour, Joseph Leiter's eligible, which was the leading 2 year old at New Orleans last winter.

64 to Enter Clark Stake.

Prince d'Amour is among sixty-four nominees for the Clark handicap, $10,000 added stake that will feature the opening day at the Downs May 2. In all there were eleven derby eligibles nominated for the Clark, a mile and sixteenth race for 3 year olds and upward.

Another prominent derby eligible named for the Clark is Scotland's Glory, owned by C. W. Hay, which has shown up well in short workouts here. Incidentally the winner of the 1927 Kentucky Derby, Whiskery, is among the Clark eligibles.

Up is the [illegible]nd winner of 1931 derbies to reach Kentucky. Spanish Play, which won the Louisiana derby for C. H. Knebelkamp, is at Lexington engaging in almost daily workouts. He will race in the Ben Ali handicap, $3,000 added feature of the opening day at Lexington Saturday. Lightning Bolt, winner of the Florida derby, was not nominated for the Kentucky Derby.

Pittsburgher Shows Speed.

Pittsburgher, T. E. Mueller's big colt, continues to advance in training and is credited with the fastest mile workout to date, running the distance in 1:42 4-5 at the Downs At Lexington two eligibles have turned in fast mile moves, both in 1:43 3-5. They are Sweep All, owned by Charles T. Fisher, and Kenashaw, owned by D. D. Canfield.

Lerosa, owned by James C. Ellis, was the second derby eligible among the 130 to be declared definitely out of the race. Injured in Florida, he has not recovered sufficiently to be placed in training. The first to be declared out was Skiffy, E. B. McLean's only nominee, which went lame and was withdrawn from training.

Lake Forest Captain to Compete in Kansas Meet

Lake Forest college will send Carl Parker, track captain, to the University of Kansas relays next Saturday to compete in the decathlon. The event was arranged by the Missouri Valley A. A. U. to serve as a tryout for the Olympic games.

Parker, who came to Lake Forest from the Rochester [Ind.] High school, is the greatest all-around track star ever developed at Lake Forest.

Chicago Certain to Get Olympic Fight, Track Tests

The opposition of the west coast to holding the Olympic tryouts in boxing and track and field in Chicago has disappeared and in all probability these events will be held here in the latter part of June, 1932.

Definite settlement of the controversy was made known by William May Garland, member of the international Olympic committee and director of organization of the tenth Olympiad, who stopped in Chicago yesterday. Mr. Garland, who was on his way from Los Angeles to Barcelona, Spain, to meet with the international Olympic committee, conferred with Avery Brundage, president of the National and Central A. A. U. and head of the American Olympic association.

Cites Boxers' Condition.

Regarding the part Chicago is to play in the Olympic preliminaries, Mr. Garland said:

"There is no opposition to holding any of the tryouts in Chicago. The only question that has come up has concerned the lapse of time between the tryouts and the finals in Los Angeles. We feel that if the tryouts are held in Chicago on July 15, as originally proposed, athletes who must travel from the west coast and then return within two weeks of the opening of the Olympic games will not be in condition for the final gruelling tests.

"Consequently, it is our desire to hold the trials in Chicago during the latter part of June."

The move to eliminate women from the Olympic competitions will come to a head at the Barcelona meeting, he said. He added:

"Personally I feel that women have every right to be represented in the Olympic games. Only one event, the 800 meter run, should be eliminated from their program. Otherwise, I hope that, with the aid of committee members for the northern countries of Europe, women will have full representation on the Olympic program."

Football on Program.

In reply to an inquiry by Mr. Brundage as to what other sports than those on the Olympic program would be held in Los Angeles in 1932, Mr. Garland said:

"We are allowed two demonstration competitions as part of the Olympic program. Football will be one of these events. This is a typically American game and at the present time the most popular athletic competition here. Lacrosse probably will be the other.

"At the same time we are making plans to have Los Angeles the center of all sports and the local committee is making provisions for coöperating with the sponsors of sports not on the Olympic program. In this connection I might say that we are further advanced in our preparations for the games than any other city I have known to be a year and three months before they are to be held. Our stadium seating a maximum of 125,000 persons already has been completed."

Final plans for the participation of all countries in the tenth Olympiad will be made at the Barcelona meeting.

WAKEFORDS AND I.W.A.C. BROWNIES WIN CAGE TITLES

The Bill Farr Wakefords defeated the Gladiators A. C., 33 to 21, yesterday, to win the lightweight championship in the Calumet region basketball tournament held at the South Chicago Y. M. C. A.

The I. W. A. C. Brownies, favorites in the girls' division, trimmed Calumet Memorial Park, 43 to 10, and the Primrose A. C., last year's heavyweight champion, beat the American Legion, 29 to 20, in the heavyweight final.

Freeman and Thompson in Ring Feature

New York, April 12.—(AP)—A welterweight championship battle between Tommy Freeman of Cleveland and Young Jack Thompson, San Francisco Negro, tops the fistic schedule this week and automatically shifts the nation's boxing center to Cleveland. The bout, at the title distance of 15 rounds, will be held in Cleveland's Auditorium Tuesday night.

Freeman captured the 147 pound crown in Cleveland last September, when he scored a surprising decision victory over Thompson. The Cleveland probably will enter the ring on Tuesday a slight favorite over the California Negro.

Gorilla Jones, Akron, O., Negro, will clash with Paul Pirrone, Cleveland welterweight, in the ten round semi-final.

The only other shows of more than passing interest will be held at Philadelphia tomorrow night and at Boston on Tuesday. At Philadelphia Benny Bass., junior lightweight champion, meets young Firpo of Pennsgrove, N. J., in a return ten rounder at catch weights. Firpo won a disputed decision over Bass in a clash at Philadelphia on March 30.

Dave Shade, veteran New York middleweight, meets Leo Larivee of Waterbury, Conn., in the feature bout at Boston. Bouts on the national schedule include:

Tomorrow—at Philadelphia, Benny Bass, Philadelphia, vs. Young Firpo, Pennsgrove, N. J., junior lightweights [nontitle], 10; at Akron, O., Jack McVey, New York Negro, vs. K. O. Kelly, Akron Negro, middleweights, 10; at Cincinnati, Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, vs. Tommy Paul, Buffalo, featherweights, 10; at New York, Prospect Hall, Paul Berlenbach, New York, vs. Frank Hornick, New York, light heavyweights, 8; at New York, Jamaica arena, Herman Heller, Germany, vs. Pavesi Presidio, Italy, heavyweights, 8.

Tuesday—At Cleveland, Tommy Freeman, Cleveland, vs. Young Jack Thompson, San Francisco, welterweights (title), 10; Gorilla Jones, Akron Negro, vs. Paul Pirrone, Cleveland, welterweights, and Tommy Grogan, Omaha, vs. Joey Goodman, Cleveland, lightweights, each 10; at Boston, Dave Shade, New York, vs. Leo Larivee, Waterbury, Conn., middleweights, and Johnny Indrisano, Boston, vs. Tommy Rios, Mexico, welterweights, each 10; at New York, Coliseum, Joe Scalfaro, New York, vs. Johnny McMillen, Scotland, featherweights, 10.

22,000 WATCH BROOKLYN BEAT YANKS AGAIN, 11-7

Collect Twelve Hits Off Weinert, Pennock.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 12.—(AP)—The Brooklyn Robins clouted two New York Yankee left handers for twelve hits today and defeated the American leaguers for the second time in as many days, 11 to 7. A crowd of 22,000 saw the game.

Elsonette again led the Brooklyn attack, driving in three runs with a couble and a single, with Fresco Thompson, new Robin second sacker, sparkling on the defense. Frederick and Lazzeri hit home runs.

Thompson was slightly injured in the eighth inning. His right hand was cut by Myril Hoag's spikes. Score:

New York	000	112	102— 7 12 1
Brooklyn	301	001	22*—11 12 1

Batteries — Weinert, Pennock and Dickey; Bomich, Mattingly and Picinich.

SENATORS WIN FINAL.

Washington, D. C., April 12.—(AP)—Winding up their pre-season exhibition fills by drubbing the Rochester Redwings, 3 to 1, the Washington Senators today ran their string of wins to 16, against four losses and two ties, in the spring card.

Rochester, winner of the "little world's series" last year, outhit Washington, as Billy Southworth, Redwing manager, used three hurlers and kept the Senators to five safeties, one a double by Sam Rice.

Carl Fischer, left handed rookie pitcher, went the route for Washington, scattering the eight hits he allowed and holding Rochester scoreless after the second inning. Score:

Rochester	010	000	000—1 8 2
Washington	000	001	11*—3 5 0

Batteries—Bell, Irvin, Foreman and Jones; Fischer and Spencer.

PHILS TRIM ORIOLES.

Baltimore, Md., April 12.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Nationals collected two runs in the ninth inning here today on two errors and a wild pitch to defeat the Baltimore Orioles, 4 to 3.

Sand and Stroner, Orioles, contributed home runs. Score:

Philadelphia (N.)	100	001	002—4 6 0
Baltimore (L.)	020	100	000—3 11 4

Batteries — Bolen, Elliott, Schessler and Ruel; Davis; Clarkson, Gumbert and Gibson, Dunning.

BROWNS, 6; CARDS, 4.

St. Louis, Mo., April 12.—(AP)—The Browns defeated the Cardinals today, 6 to 4, in the final game of the annual two game spring series. The Cardinals won yesterday.

Young Dizzy Dean, who started for the Cardinals, had a bad first inning, when he allowed three hits, two of them slow infield rollers, and issued a base on balls, which gave the Browns three runs. A homer by Oscar Melillo was the only other trouble Dean had. He retired in the sixth inning.

Big George Blaeholder pitched superb ball for six innings, but when he left the scene the Cardinals found the opposition less puzzling. Frisch, the first batter to face Stiles, who relieved Blaeholder, hit a homer. Score

Browns	300	100	02*—6 10 2

Batteries — Dean, Derringer, Johnson and Rimmon, Wilson; Blaeholder, Stiles, Kimsey and Ferrell.

REDS, 8; INDIANS, 7.

Cincinnati, O., April 12.—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds made it two straight over the Cleveland Indians here today by winning, 8 to 7, in the last exhibition game for both teams.

The Reds had one big inning at the expense of a rookie hurler, Shoffner, who went in for Thomas in the eighth. He walked three men. The Reds combined the walks with four hits and an error by Hunnefield to score six runs and put them in front.

Thomas held the Reds to four hits in seven innings and kept them to two runs. Score:

Cleveland	011	000	401—7 15 2

Batteries — Thomas, Shoffner and Sprinz; Kolp, Frey and Sukeforth.

TIGERS, 10; PIRATES, 4.

Detroit, Mich., April 12.—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers trounced the Pittsburgh Pirates, 10 to 4, here today in the final game of the training season to make 7 seven victories in nine starts against the National leaguers this spring.

Vic Sorrell and Art Herring held the Pirates to seven hits, while Detroit pounded Meine for 15 safeties, including a two bagger, three triples and a home run. All of Pittsburgh's runs were scored off Sorrell. Herring allowing only one hit in the last four innings. Dale Alexander hit Detroit's homer. Score:

Detroit	040	030	12*—10 15 0

Batteries — Meine and Memsley; Sorrell, Herring and Grabowski.

RED SOX, 6; BRAVES, 0.

Boston, Mass., April 12.—(AP)—A slugging Red Sox team drove the ball to the far places today to win the second and concluding game of the city series from the Braves by a score of 6 to 0.

MacFayden, Gaston, and Lisenbee pitched three innings each for the Sox and allowed four scattered hits. Seibold started for the Braves, but was ineffective. Oliver made two doubles and a single for one-third of the Sox's hits. Score:

Boston Red Sox	001	400	001—6 9 1

Big League Clubs Clear Decks for 1931 Inaugural

nant years for the Cardinals, and Manager Gabby Street said he would not interfere with that tradition, so Rehm will hurl against Cincinnati there Tuesday. With the exception of Holdout Chick Hafey, the Cardinal lineup will be the same that opposed the Athletics in the world series last season. Ernie Orsatti is slated for Hafey's left field post.

Manager Bill Killefer, while confident of his team's ability to play "interesting" baseball, is not sure his Browns will upset the dope which places them pretty far down the list. Stewart will open against Detroit here Tuesday.

A.'S COCKY; PHILS PEPPY.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 12.—(AP)—Baseball's getaway Tuesday finds the Athletics [American league] and Phillies [National league] ready to begin marching—the A.'s a trifle cocky, the Phils more peppy than a year ago and minus the tallender complex.

Connie Mack is standing pat with his two-time winners and said tonight he would start his world series lineup against the Senators in Washington. Earnshaw, right hander, or the fire balling Lefty Grove were his pitching selections.

The Phillies, opening here against the Giants, expect to pitch Ace Elliott. Klein, Arlett, and Lee give the club a hard hitting outfield. The infield has been strengthened by the acquisition of Bartell at short and Mallon at second.

CAPITAL BACKS SENATORS.

Washington, D. C., April 12.—(AP)—The Washington Senators, ready and optimistic, will open their pennant bid on Tuesday against their old rivals, the champion Athletics, with the active support of the capital from the President down.

Manager Walter Johnson probably will start Lloyd Brown, a good early season pitcher, although Bump Hadley is a possibility. Brown is a southpaw and Hadley a right hander.

President Hoover will toss out the first ball and a capacity crowd of nearly 35,000, including cabinet members and congressmen, is expected if the weather is favorable.

REDS APPEAR WEAK.

Cincinnati, O., April 12.—(AP)—The entire squad of the Cincinnati Reds was in good physical condition today, Manager Dan Howley said, as the team prepared for the opening day game with the champion Cardinals here Tuesday. The Reds had anything but a successful training trip in the south. Manager Howley believes he will start Red Lucas.

BOSTON TEAMS HOPEFUL.

Boston, Mass., April 12.—(AP)—The Braves and the Red Sox, Boston entries in the National and American leagues, will begin their seasons Tuesday with higher hopes than they have entertained for the last few years.

The Braves, fortified by two slugging outfielders in Wesley Schulmerich and Bob Worthington, will face the Brooklyn Robins here, while the Sox, under their new manager, John Collins, will oppose the Yankees at New York.

Manager McKechnie of the Braves probably will send Harry Seibold after the first game, while Danny Macfayden most likely will be Collins' choice.

INDIANS GROOM FERRELL.

Cleveland, O., April 12.—(AP)—Wesley Ferrell, one of the best right handers in the American league, will attempt to start the Cleveland Indians off victoriously Tuesday against the Chicago White Sox—as a contribution to the Indians' "fighting chance" for a championship and to his own effort to better his record of 25 victories last year.

Batting strength should show improvement with Lew Fonseca at first, releasing Eddie Morgan, home run hitter, for third base duty, and hard hitting Joe Vosmik, recruit, bursting into an already offensively strong outfield. Second base is well protected with Johnny Hodapp recovered from a knee injury.

PIRATES ARE READY.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 12.—(AP)—Good health, a vital element absent last spring, will be present among Pittsburgh's Pirates as the 1931 diamond campaign gets under way.

Last year Capt. Pie Traynor had an eye affliction and Lloyd Waner was unavailable for more than half the season, due to illness. Both are reported in good shape now. This factor, in addition to the strength Tommy Thevenow is expected to add at shortstop, has made Manager Jewel Ens jubilant.

Southpaw Larry French appears to be favored for opening day mound duty against the Cubs at Chicago.

A NIGHT LETTER from Ring Lardner

Tucson, Ariz., April 12.—Willis Clough, the Tucson boy now with Pittsburgh, writes from Detroit: "Dear friend, I certainly had a good scare today when Manager Ens first told me he did not think it would be possible to take me to Chicago for the opening and for a minute I was scared that he was going to give me my unconditional release, though I been in condition ever since I joined the club and the only time he seen me pitch was at Paso Robles, when the regulars got 12 runs off of me in 2 innings when I was not really trying but just experimenting with a nuggle ball. But it turned out that he was worried because they got a new mayor in Chicago who said he would not allow no strangers in town if they was concealed weppons and I said I havnt no concealed weppons and he says well then what have you got? Anyway it is ok now as the new mayor has went on a vacation so I will be in Chicago for the big opening and will write you about the Phillies is going to carry nine pitchers this season and Paul Waner says he wondered what they would do if they happened to get in a extra inning game." RING LARDNER.

EX-COAST PREXY DENIES REPORT ON BARNARD JOB

San Francisco, Cal., April 12.—(AP)—William McCarthy, San Francisco, former president of the Pacific Coast Baseball league, said tonight he had not been approached with a proposition to succeed the late E. S. Barnard as president of the American league.

Reports from New York last night said William H. McCarthy, president of the Pacific Coast league, was slated to succeed E. S. Barnard as president of the American league and that the election probably would be held next month. McCarthy was said to have the support of the New York, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Boston, and Detroit clubs.

State Ready to Give Away Pheasant Eggs

BY BOB BECKER.

Thousands of pheasant eggs which are being hatched at the Illinois game farm at Yorkville, Ill., will be distributed to farmers and others in Illinois who have some hard working barnyard hens willing to hatch clutches of these valuable eggs. According to an announcement made last Saturday by Ralph B. Bradford, director of conservation in Illinois, requests for pheasant eggs will be filled as they are received. Residents of the state who own or lease farm land on which it is desired to increase the pheasant population should write to the department of conservation, Springfield, Ill., and file a request for a shipment of these pheasant eggs.

The eggs are packed in small baskets with full directions on how to hatch them and also instructions on what to feed the ringneck chicks as soon as they come out of the shell.

Many of the states in the Mississippi valley now operate one or more game farms to produce pheasant eggs and also rear live ringnecks for distribution. The ringneck is the coming game bird of North America as the prairie chicken declines and quail becomes scarcer, due to a combination of factors. Missouri and Nebraska are two states which are going into the pheasant business in big style. Missouri just recently completed a statewide scientific survey of conditions affecting the increase of ringnecks in the state in order to put their bird production schedule on a solid practical basis.

In the Dakotas the conservation departments are extending the range of the pheasants, trapping excess birds in some counties or in counties where the farmers want to get rid of some of their bird neighbors, and then releasing them in other localities. What good shooting can do in the way of playing tunes on cash registers is well illustrated in the Dakotas. The millions of pheasants out there, annually attracting thousands of hunters, bring thousands of dollars into the state every fall. This "foreign" cash is spent with railroads, hotels, garages, restaurants, sporting goods firms, and others. In fact, the sport of pheasant hunting is attracting so much gold that chambers of commerce in South Dakota now consider it worth while to campaign for hunters in order that the latter will make certain cities their headquarters while roaming the fields for their sport.

218 OPEN PLAY TODAY IN PING PONG TOURNEY

Play for the Chicago district ping pong championships, with a field of 218 battling for titles in four divisions, will open tonight at 230 West Randolph street.

In the unlimited class, for men over 18 years, there are several athletes—tennis, golf, and ping pong stars—who are favored to take the championship. While Coleman Clark, western ping pong champion, looms as the strongest contender, tennis players such as George Jennings, national public parks titleholder; Louis [Red] Thalheimer, Allerton ace; Jose Alonzo, former Davis cup star, and Thor Gravem, California racqueteer, are all capable of upsetting Clark. Others include Louis Levinson, Texas open golf champion, and Max Rushakoff, state Y. M. C. A. ping pong leader, and Isoto Fushimi, champion of Japan.

Leading the women competitors is Miss Helen Ovendon, former English ping pong star. Bernice [Jackie] Ayers, Betty Eutin, and Helen Bartavis, all Allerton tennis players, are strong players.

Tiny Lewis is the junior favorite. The boys' division will establish its first champion.

German Five Defeats Poles by 257 Pins

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Two 700 series enabled the German All-Stars to overwhelm the Polish All-Star quintet by 257 pins last night at the conclusion of their two day match on the Harding alleys. The victors went into the final series leading by 27 pins, and through the efforts of Eddie Krems with 707 and Ernie Schanz with 702 amassed a 3,139 score. The Poles shot 2,933.

Totals for the two nights were: Germans, 6,223, and Poles, 5,966. An aggregate of 1,333 gave Schanz the honor of topping both teams. Barney Krause was high man for the losers with 1,254. Scores:

Bill Lenzen and Dominick De Vito opened their 40 game bowling match at the Roseland Recreation alleys last night with a bombardment that gave the former a 2,161 total and the latter 2,083. Lenzen thus will go into next Saturday's block of ten games at the Woodlawn alleys with a 78 pin advantage.

While piling up his margin, Lenzen picked up tht most difficult split which could be left. He sailed his ball after the 7-10 setup and was as surprised as the spectators when both pins dropped. This brilliant shot made it possible for Lenzen to wind up the evening's activity with a 213 game. Their scores:

Lenzen	193	196	226	203	183

Chicagoans are urged to consider Franklin VALUE ~ ~ the highest ever offered ~ ~

Lower prices ~ ~ highest quality ~ convenient terms make it easy to own a Franklin

That fastidious group of people who purchase fine cars is steadily swinging toward Franklin—and air-cooling. Since January, 1929, Franklin has enjoyed a 41% gain in the percentage of the cars sold to these discriminating individuals. An impressive tribute to air-cooling—the principle that has made possible Franklin's extremely smooth, quiet, active power—Franklin's airplane performance—and Franklin's extra margin of riding comfort. So brilliant have been the achievements of air-cooling in both aviation and in Franklin, that engineering authorities are asking, "Is water-cooling in motor cars doomed?" Try the air-cooled power of Franklin—the airplane feel.

WHEAT TRADERS SEE INDICATION OF UPTURN SOON

Europe Less Certain of Its Supplies.

Domestic wheat statistics never were more bearish than at present, but at the same time there are indications of a change in sentiment among many traders, who believe that after two years or more of bear markets a moderate change for the better is due, and they are more friendly to the buying side. They are taking advantage of breaks to accumulate wheat and occasionally sell it out on bulges and replace on recessions.

This change in sentiment was due largely to the foreign situation becoming less bearish. Crop conditions abroad are less favorable than a year ago. Shipments from Argentina and Australia have fallen off, and possibly they have seen their peak. Importing Europe has run on light supplies and is beginning to change its attitude, as evidenced by the purchase of upwards of 16,000,000 bushels Canadian wheat by exporters and foreigners in the last week. Some Canadian hard winters have also been taken at low prices, as indicated by reports from Antwerp that American hard winters had sold c. i. f. there at 77½ cents.

Russ Shipments Drop.

Russian shipments have fallen off, and there is no certainty as to when they will be resumed on a larger scale. There are indications that importing Europe will have the smallest carryover in years, while Canada, the United States and probably the southern hemisphere countries will have a liberal stock carryover; and also it is said that the latter will cut their acreage 15 to 20 per cent. In the United States prospects for winter wheat have never been better as a whole. The government report suggests 644,000,000 bu, and with the conditions at the middle of April favorable, expectations are that there will be a larger crop than that of 604,000,000 bu harvested last year.

The government report estimates that there will be a surplus of 290,000,000 bu on July 1 next year, which, with 275,000,000 that we carried over July 1 this year, will make 565,000,000 bu.

The spring wheat crop is expected to be smaller than last year, and uncertainty as to a sufficient supply of moisture for both the American and the Canadian northwest is a most important factor and is being watched by all interests in the trade. The Canadian report issued on Saturday estimates the surplus 275,000,000 bu against 229,000,000 bu last year; so that North America may have a surplus sufficient to supply European import requirements.

May Change for Better.

With supplies in hand large and prospects for the new crop generally favorable, should there be any change in the situation it is expected to be for the better. Elevator capacity has been increased upwards of 100,000,000 bu in a year, as indicated by reports to the Grain Stabilization corporation, but with the large hold-over the trade fears that there will be a scarcity of elevator space should the new wheat move in volume and the disposition of old wheat be slow. Despite the fact that farm board officials have announced that there will be no change in their policy regarding handling the old crop, the trade is afraid that a change might be made and that the farm board might unload without giving notice.

A statement issued by the Farmers National Grain corporation of its business for the last year showed purchase of 112,000,000 bu of wheat from farmers and that the Stabilization corporation holds 200,000,000 bu of cash wheat and futures.

See Decrease in Supply.

Expectations are that there will be a good decrease in the visible supply in today's report, and the trade is inclined to believe that the peak of accumulation has been passed.

Wheat prices moved within a range of almost 3c during the week, with the close in Chicago ¼c higher to ½c lower on new crop and unchanged to ½c lower on May. The old May closed at 83 1-3c and July new crop finished at 62¾@63c, September at 61⅝@61½c, and December, 64⅞-64½c. Winnipeg May closed at 60c, July at 61¼c, and October at 63⅛c, showing a gain of 3c to 3⅛c for the week. Prices in Chicago for the week follow:

Corn Sold on Bulges.

Disposition on part of local traders to sell corn on bulges met no opposition, and prices worked lower, establishing a new season's low for May and September, and were within a small fraction of the low on July. Lack of outside support, coupled with scattering operations between wheat and corn, put more grain on the market than buyers were able to absorb. Country offerings were not large, as farmers are busy in the fields, interior points not pressing cash corn on the market to any great extent, and cash sentiment was weak.

Expectations for the new corn crop are progressing earlier than usual and it will be no surprise to see the presentation of an increase in acreage indicated by the government report become a fact. At the close futures were ½@1¼c lower, May being 60⅝@61c; July, 61¾@62⅛c; September, 60⅝@

Mexican Efforts to Uphold Silver Are Only Temporary

This is the last of three dispatches on the effect of the drastic decline in the price of silver on the monetary system and commerce of Mexico.

BY JOHN CORNYN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, April 12.—The preceding attempts of the Mexican government at rehabilitation and stabilization of the activities of the nation have all been based upon conditions existing in the body politic and they may therefore be classed as more or less permanent. But the constant erratic fluctuation of the silver currency has been fought with measures that, on the face of them, can be nothing but transitory. Among these are the following:

A dollar credit was established in New York, early in the present year, to attempt to stabilize exchange and to prevent the abnormal fluctuations in silver currency believed to be largely due to the operations of speculators. This was also to be used as a means of studying the real causes behind these fluctuations.

Starts Campaign.

A campaign was started and engineered by the National Revolutionary party to encourage the consumption of home produced articles to the discouragement or exclusion of foreign importations. This was made nation-wide through the many hundreds of local political organizations; and it is still in full force. The move is as yet, however, too young to measure its accomplishments. It has encouraged the haciendados and planters to begin the reworking of their lands, after more than a decade of partial or total abandonment.

Duties were raised on articles classed as luxuries imported from abroad and especially upon those which could be manufactured or grown in Mexico, with a view to discouraging importations and thus lowering the bill which has yearly to be paid in foreign moneys, especially American dollars. This, it was hoped, would decrease the balance of trade now so heavily in favor of the United States, and here looked upon as the chief cause of the fluctuation of the silver peso.

Temporary Measures.

But the government, owing to the more or less disorganized condition of the country following two decades of intermittent revolutionary activities, is naturally not in a position, even if it wished to, to inaugurate any extensively organized plan of national protection. So these protective measures must be looked upon as temporary and intended simply to alleviate present conditions, and incidentally to encourage national activities.

One of the most discussed measures taken to stabilize the silver currency is a decree issued through the department of the treasury ordering the banks of Mexico to increase their reserves in silver proportionate to the amount of silver deposits carried on their books.

This is intended to withdraw from circulation large amounts of silver currency with the idea of increasing the demand for it and thus decreasing this disparity between Mexican gold and silver currency and incidentally between them and foreign moneys. It is claimed, too, that this will automatically increase the body of business transacted in silver. Banks were given until March 26 of the present year in which to comply with this requisition, which has already increased the local demand for silver currency and, it is claimed, helped somewhat to stabilize it.

What Bankers Claim.

The bankers claim that this is an unusual measure the outcome of which is still to be seen since Mexico is theoretically at least, on a gold basis; and that it is a recognition of the real position of silver as the working currency of the nation.

The Mexican government fully recognizes that all and every means taken here to stabilize the national currency can only be local in their effects because the question is one that affects not this country alone but the whole world; and that all she can do is procede with the reorganization and reconstruction of the country along lines that will help do away with conditions tending to encourage the fluctuation of the national currency.

It is fully recognized here that the fixing of a lower and more permanent par between the Mexican peso and the American dollar and other foreign moneys must necessarily depend upon the economic development of the country and the revaluation and increase of the principal articles of export; the curtailing of the amount of silver currency coined by the Mexican government, and the general limitation of silver coinage by international agreement.

Looks to Future.

Mexico is now attempting, as far as her resources will permit, to absorb large quantities of silver currency in national activities such as irrigation, the building of national highways, the encouragement of increased agricultural output by the peasant farmers, of the industries and foreign capital, the more extensive distribution of the national products through lower railway rates, and the building of local highways to connect with the national roads now under construction by the national government. All these means look to the future and they signify that Mexico's great bulk of business is and will continue to be done through silver.

Says Auto Industry May Near Normal in Summer

John W. Scoville, chief statistician of the Chrysler corporation, said that if business continues to improve at the rate it has in the last 90 days, "it is not optimistic to predict that by midsummer the automobile industry will be enjoying something like its normal business." Retail deliveries of all makes of cars had fallen last November to 47 per cent of normal, he said, adding that the recovery commenced in December with deliveries at 61 per cent, while January increased to 67 per cent, and February reports show that this figure has been raised to 75 per cent.

Cities Service Assets Gain $192,397,236

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 12.—Net earnings of the Cities Service company in 1930 amounted to $84,582,958, an increase of $15,100,000 over those for the year before, while total assets of the company rose from $1,090,227,318 at the end of 1929 to $1,282,624,554 at the close of last year, an increase of $192,397,266.

These figures are contained in the twenty-first annual report of the company just mailed to stockholders. The report summarizes the large expansion of the organization in the last year and shows that the total number of holders of securities of Cities Service and subsidiaries increased from about 750,000 to 1,000,000. Common stockholders of Cities Service numbered 460,000, against 359,000 a year before. The company spent more than $170,000,000 in 1930 on new construction and acquisitions.

Consolidated gross earnings totaled $213,036,000, as compared with $185,651,053 for the year before. The consolidated net earnings of $84,862,958, establishing a new high record, are before preferred dividends and other charges. The company already has reported that net earnings applicable to Cities Service common stock and reserves were $41,614,216 for the year ended Dec. 31, against $29,591,440 in 1929.

Consolidated current assets at the end of 1930 aggregated $179,797,350, including $73,186,495 in cash. The report says gross and net earnings of Cities Service electric subsidiaries compared favorably with 1929 and 1928. Power sales showed a decline, but the earnings were greater than in 1928 and only 1 per cent less than in 1929.

Plan to Reopen Crawford State Savings Bank in May

Plans for the reopening of the Crawford State Savings bank at Crawford avenue and 12th street were discussed yesterday at a meeting of between 2,000 and 3,000 depositors at the Lawndale theater. Daniel A. Uretz, chairman of the depositors' protective committee, announced that funds enough have been subscribed to insure the reopening of the institution under another name, probably the middle of May. One of the large loop banks, he said, will assist in the reorganization. Bondholders of the bank will hold a meeting tonight at 3854 Roosevelt road.

HINT GREAT BRITAIN MAY BOOST TOBACCO DUTY IN NEW BUDGET

LONDON, April 12.—(AP)—Hints given tobacco importers to limit the amount of stocks to be removed from warehouses during the next few weeks are being interpreted as foreshadowing an increase in the tobacco duty when the budget is announced on April 27.

There has been no change in the tobacco duty since 1927 when Winston Churchill, then chancellor of the exchequer, increased it from eight shillings two pence a pound to eight shillings ten pence. The duty on tobacco grown within the empire, under the preference scheme, is six shillings nine pence half penny per pound.

How important tobacco is as a source of revenue can be realized from the fact that the increase of a half penny an ounce in 1927 brought in nearly $20,000,000 more to the nation and that in 1929-'30 the tobacco revenues totaled £62,703,589 [about $313,967,945].

The tobacco federation of the British empire asked last fall for a quota for empire production on leaf tobacco manufactured in Britain, or, if this could not be granted, an increase of one shilling four pence a pound on foreign grown tobacco, unmanufactured.

Introduction of the British preferential duty has developed consumption of empire tobacco in Britain to 17 per cent of the total, it was asserted.

Probably 50 per cent of the pipe tobacco used in England is of dominion or colonial production, but not more than 3 per cent of the tobacco in cigarets is empire grown. The latter is the more important consumption in point of volume.

Since empire tobacco has begun to compete with America, special U. S. tobacco trade commissioners have been appointed to investigate the possibilities of increasing sales of American leaf and to encourage the more extensive use of their product in the United Kingdom.

Increase in imports of American tobacco into Great Britain in the last few years are revealed by the following figures: 1925, 162,718,941 pounds; 1928, 171,838,580 pounds; 1929, 206,279,535 pounds.

Chicago and Alton March Net Income Is $31,867

The Chicago and Alton railroad, one of the first of the carriers to report March results, reported net operating income of $31,867, compared with $91,149 in March of 1930.

MARKETS' CALM IS UNMOVED AS TRADE TARRIES

Quietly Prepare for Better Times.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 12.—The markets seem to have accommodated themselves to the idea of a spring trade which is bringing only the so-called "seasonal" expansion of trade activities, and has not raised the signal for genuine trade revival.

It is interesting to observe with how different an attitude this disappointment (if it can fairly be called that) has been received, as compared with the consternation exhibited when spring time revival failed to materialize a year ago. The inference is warranted that the business community is now confronting the situation, as it did not do in 1930, in an entirely calm and practical frame of mind.

Confidence in Future.

The spirit of quiet confidence in the longer future, with acceptance of the belief that recovery will be very gradual, contrasts as impressively with the despair of last autumn as with the insistence, during last year's first two months, that normal conditions were to be restored overnight. Even the dismal picture presented by the successive cuts in company dividends has little effect in shattering this compromise. It is a situation in which markets and producers are awaiting the turn for the better and quietly preparing for it, but not predicting the date of its arrival.

The world's grain markets still remain the most obscure part of the economic landscape.

Last week's government forecast of the winter wheat crop illustrated the strangely confused situation. The price of wheat, at the time that crop was planted, was not as low as the present "unpegged" price for contracts to deliver wheat from the crop of 1931. But it had already touched 76¼c, the lowest price in twenty-three years and supposedly below cost of production for the average farmer.

Yet the acreage sown to winter wheat last autumn was reduced barely

MARKETS' CALM UNSHATTERED AS TRADE TARRIES

Quietly Preparing for Better Times.

1 per cent from that of the preceding year, when the Chicago price was around $1.30. Whatever this indicated as to the farmer's attitude, at any rate nature gave a cynical touch to it. She seems to have provided one of the most favorable winter seasons on record.

The department's present forecast is for a winter wheat yield nearly 40,000,000 bushels larger than the actual yield of 1930 and 65,500,000 above 1929, the largest, in fact, since the last crop harvested and sold under the wartime "guaranteed price" of $2.20 per bushel. The estimate may be substantially reduced by unfavorable influences between now and July, and it will be some weeks before we shall know precisely what preparations have been made for the spring wheat crop. If the winter wheat estimate should turn out correct and a spring crop equal to last year's be harvested, the country's total yield would be the largest since 1919. Even with the 12 per cent reduction in spring wheat acreage, suggested by the somewhat shadowy report on "farmers' intentions," the total crop would have been exceeded only four times since the war.

Reverses Situation.

How strangely perverted the present situation is may be seen by recalling how the markets would have greeted this result in past normal years. Such estimates would have cheered up financial spirits. But, with our own "carryover" of unsold wheat on July 1 now estimated at 290,000,000 bu., as against 265,000,000 a year before, 245,000,000 in 1929, and only 128,000,000 in 1928, and with the world's expected unsold surplus more than 500,000,000, comparing with only 272,000,000 in 1926, the situation is reversed. There seems to be no reason for supposing that foreign wheat planters have followed any different policy from our own.

We have not yet the comparative figures of world consumption at the lower prices; that in time may provide the key to the grain trade deadlock. If it is any comfort, the historical record will show that exactly the same thing has happened to the grain trade and to grain prices in the sequel to all other world-wide wars.

Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee.

Will you kindly give me information concerning Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad company preferred stock and your opinion of it? D. G.

Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad company owns and operates an electric railroad line between Chicago and Milwaukee and branches to other points.

On Dec. 31, 1930, capitalization consisted of 79,901 shares of 7 per cent cumulative prior lien preferred [par $100], 76,192 shares of 6 per cent noncumulative preferred [par $100] and 80,000 common shares [par $100].

Although prior preferred dividends have been earned for the last seven years, for the last five years earnings in any one year have not been equal to the dividend requirements of the 6 per cent preferred.

Net income for 1930 was $597,855, or $7.69 per prior preferred share and 15 cents per $6 preferred. For 1929 net income was $723,066, equal to $9.30 per prior preferred share and $2.79 per $5 preferred share. Net income for 1930 included profit on sale of investments of $801,182. No income from this source was reported in 1929.

On Dec. 31, 1930, current assets were $1,313,913, and current liabilities were $3,171,102. Excess of current liabilities over current assets was $1,857,189 against $629,254 the year before. The company's funded debt totaled $32,310,600.

Although dividends are being paid on the prior lien preferred none are reported on the $6 preferred or the common.

The prior preferred is speculative. The $6 preferred and the common are more so.

International-Great Northern.

Will you please give me your opinion of the International-Great Northern Railway adjustment 6s, due 1952? H. G. P.

International-Great Northern Railway company is indirectly controlled by Missouri Pacific Railroad company. It operates 1,159 miles of road in Texas.

Earnings before interest on the adjustment bonds has shown a downward trend since 1926. Net loss of the company for 1930 after all charges, including interest on the $17,000,000 6 per cent adjustment bonds, was $1,764,815, against net loss of $424,875, in 1929. For the seven years to Dec. 31, 1929, only 80 per cent of the interest on the adjustment 6s was earned.

The interest on the adjustment bonds is payable if earned. The interest for the period of July 1 to Dec. 31, 1930, was deferred.

The adjustment 6s, series A, due 1952, are more a speculation than an investment.
